

Comeback!

Heels squeeze UVa 3-2 to take ACC Tourney

By S.L. PRICE

The North Carolina baseball team won the ACC tournament Sunday.

In a style of play that has become their trademark, the heart-attack Tar Heels used a two-out, two-strike double by Greg Schuler to stay alive in the ninth, and a Pete Kumiega two-strike suicide squeeze in the twelfth to beat the Virginia Cavaliers 3-2 at Boshamer Stadium.

The victory gives North Carolina an automatic berth in the NCAA South Atlantic regional tournament.

Right fielder Barney Spooner opened the twelfth with a walk, stole second when Virginia catcher Brad Miller hit pitcher Mike Gordon with a pick-off attempt, and moved to third on UNC shortstop Chris Pittaro's sacrifice bunt along the first base line.

After Kumiega swung at and missed two pitches in the dirt, Spooner took off for home and Kumiega laid another bunt down the right side to bring in the winning run.

"Before I went to the plate, coach told me to swing away, but don't be surprised if he called the squeeze bunt," said Kumiega, who went 0-for-five on the day. "I didn't really think about it. I don't think bunting is that hard if you're just willing to stick your nose in and do it."

The Tar Heels tied it at 2-2 in the ninth when designated hitter Joe Rocklein knocked a hard bouncer to shortstop Todd Kirtley, who mishandled the ball and did not make the throw in time. With two outs and two strikes and spectators leaving the stadium, Schuler pounded a double into the left field corner to score Rocklein and then advanced to third when left fielder Donnie Meeks missed the cutoff man on the throw.

UNC left fielder Jim Thrift then nicked a looping single off the handle of the bat to bring in Schuler for the tying run.

"It was one of those do or die situations," said Schuler. "I'd rather not go through it again."

"It's the biggest hit of my life," said Thrift, a freshman. "No question."

If it weren't for those two hits, the championship would be back in Charlottesville. Virginia pitcher Dave Hopkins limited the Tar Heels to just three Pittaro hits through eight innings.

"Dave pitched his guts out," Virginia coach Dennis Womack said. "This is my 10th year coaching, and this has got to be the hardest defeat."

The Cavalier batters gave Hopkins a little breathing room early. In the first inning, second baseman Steve Heon doubled, reached second on Miller's sacrifice bunt, and crossed the plate after Glenn Harris singled. Virginia scored again in the third inning on back-to-back doubles by Kirtley and Heon.

Freshman pitcher Steve McGuire started the game for North Carolina, but when he yielded a double to Heon in the third, UNC coach Mike Roberts pulled him.

Ronnie Huffman, relying on more off-speed pitches than he has all season, then came on to retire the next six Virginia batters.

"The curve was working for a change," said Huffman, who now holds the Carolina school record of appearances — 26 — in one season. "I don't care what happens now, so long as we won it."

Senior Dave Droschak came in to relieve Huffman in the eighth inning and he did not allow a hit until Meeks singled in the 11th. When Droschak walked the next batter — DH Joe Lange — Roberts called for freshman Tom Reed.

Reed mopped up the 11th by forcing Kevin Clarke to pop out and Kirtley to ground out to second.

In the pivotal 12th, Reed faced the top of the Virginia batting order and he removed Heon and Brad Miller for two outs. Reed then threw six pitches to the Wahoo's best hitter — Glenn Harris, .401 — before forcing him to ground out to Kumiega at first base.

"They kept throwing good pitchers at us," Womack, who tried to recruit Reed, said. "I think what they've got is talent, and talent comes to the top."

The Tar Heels, 7-5 in the ACC and 24-24 during the regular season, notched come-from-behind victories in the tournament over Maryland (8-7), and N.C. State (4-3), lost to Virginia (6-3) in between the wins, blanked No. 1 seed regular season champions Clemson (3-0), and

Trustees vote for meal plans and renovation

By DEAN FOUST
Staff Writer

The UNC Board of Trustees Student Affairs Committee unanimously approved a $3.37 million renovation plan for campus food service operations Friday. The plan includes requiring on-campus students to buy a $100 per semester "meal ticket" redeemable at campus cafeterias and snack bars along with closing Chase Cafeteria in May until a future decision concerning its use can be reached.

The proposals will be presented to the UNC Board of Governors May 14 for approval of the financing. The package will then go before the North Carolina Legislature in June for final authorization.

Charles Antle, vice chancellor for business, said Sunday the administration had set an informal deadline of December to determine the exact amount of the plan's operational costs. When the plan would go into effect is largely contingent on when final approval of the plan was received and getting the loan to fund the renovations, he said.

Antle said it was "still in the air" whether the plan would even begin by the 1983 spring semester.

In the proposal, Chase will be closed in May for an indefinite period, leaving South Campus without a nearby cafeteria. During the closing, the second floor will be renovated for Carolina Union and the Air Force ROTC activities at a cost of $659,000. The funds for these renovations will come from Union reserves and "other University non-food non-appropriated," as stated in the report.

Student Body President Mike Vandenberg said Sunday that although many students would object to being without food service on South Campus, Chase would not have been open under any of the other proposals.

The renovations would be funded through long-term financing, with the debt requirements to be met through a student food service fee estimated at $10 per student each semester.

The plan also requires on-campus students to buy a $100 per semester "meal ticket" redeemable at campus cafeterias and snack bars. The administration had proposed last Thursday if Chase were renovated as originally planned, the meal ticket could not be used at snack bars and that the price of the "meal ticket" would need to be $150 per semester.

Vandenberg said the change was a result of meetings Thursday with Donald Boulton, vice chancellor for student affairs, and John Temple, vice chancellor for business and finance, and another meeting with Gordon Rutherford, UNC planning director. "Because the improvements to Chase would be so expensive and limited to a more restrictive board plan, I felt it was not best to put a million dollars into an operation that has proved a failure for over a decade," he said.

Earlier proposals had advocated $1.5 million in renovations of Chase and a mandatory board plan for 1,000 students on both North and South campuses.

The plan also provides for the Fast Break in the Carolina Union to be converted to a delicatessen sandwich and salad area at a cost of $100,000. The move was sought by all parties in an effort to eliminate grease cooking in the Union, since the area was not originally designed for such use.

$2.77 million in renovations that would convert the first floor of Lenoir Hall to cafeteria-style food service would begin May 1983 in the plan. The facility would reopen in August 1984.

The Pine Room would be renovated in May 1984 to offer several types of fast

British take island after brief battle

The Associated Press

Helicopter-borne British commandos supported by warships and aircraft captured South Georgia Island after battling Argentine troops in a dawn attack Sunday, the British government said.

It reported British warplanes also had strafed and damaged an Argentine submarine in what appeared to be the first shots fired since Argentine troops, in a series of skirmishes, seized the Falkland Islands April 2 and claimed South Georgia a day later.

Despite the fighting, British spokesmen said "there is no declaration of war" and negotiations over the remote South Atlantic archipelago would continue.

But Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez said Sunday night: "For us, this means no negotiations with Britain for the time being."

He made his statement after arriving in Washington for talks with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and a Monday meeting of the Organization of American States.

Argentina's military junta issued a communique reporting intense fighting, but did not announce a surrender of the small unit of Argentine troops on South Georgia. The island is a Falklands dependency that was under British colonial rule directed by the British governor based in the Falklands capital of Port Stanley.

British Defense Minister John Nott, flanked by a beaming Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher outside her 10 Downing Street residence in London, said British forces "have successfully taken control of Grytviken," the main port on South Georgia's northeast coast.

He said Argentine troops ran up the white flag of surrender and that no British casualties had been reported "so far. At present we have no information on the Argentine casualty position." Nott said the British forces had landed by

Last Israelis leave Sinai Desert

RAFAH, Egypt (AP)—Israel returned the eastern Sinai Desert to Egypt Sunday, ending nearly 15 years of occupation in emotion-charged ceremonies that brought cheers, tears, riots and vows of eternal peace.

Shouts of "Allah Akbar"—"God is Great"—went up from a throng of 2,000 Arabs watching as a huge red, white and black Egyptian flag was unfurled over the new Sinai border checkpoint outside Rafah.

Anti-withdrawal activists claimed some of their people still were inside the Egyptian-ruled area and would try to stay there.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt telephoned Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Jerusalem to congratulate him on the withdrawal. The two men pledged "peace forever," a Begin spokesman said.

The 5,000 Israelis who lived and farmed in Sinai have been transplanted to homes inside Israel.

The Camp David accords governing the peace treaty and withdrawal oblige Egypt and Israel to negotiate autonomy for the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. These negotiations have been deadlocked for three years, and there are fears here that failure to reach an agreement could push Egypt to back out of some of its treaty obligations.

Legislature to tackle redistricting

RALEIGH (AP)—The General Assembly convenes again Monday night for a special session on redistricting.

The legislature will meet in its fourth special session since the six-month regular term ended last July. It is the third special session to deal with redistricting, as another special session was devoted to the state budget.

Lawmakers face decisions on a date for the postponed statewide primary and on what their next move will be in the dispute with the U.S. Justice Department over House and Senate districts.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House Speaker Liston Ramsey plan to brief the Senate and House on their options as soon as the session convenes.

Legislative lawyers say they have three basic options. —They can revise their redistricting plans in the two areas—Cumberland County in the House map and the northeastern corner on the Senate map—objected to by the Justice Department. —They can appeal the federal decision by going into federal court in the District of Columbia. —Or they can ask the federal court in Raleigh for a ruling approving their current plans on an interim basis as they are and ordering the primary to be held.

Jury selection to begin in Hinckley trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—Prosecutors are worried that if jurors trying John W. Hinckley Jr. are not isolated and guarded, they may have to be questioned daily to ensure a fair trial for the man accused of shooting the president.

Hinckley's trial is scheduled to begin Tuesday in an ornate, 200-seat ceremonial courtroom. The task of selecting 12 jurors and six alternates from an initial pool of 90 may take the rest of the week.

The 26-year-old defendant, charged with 13 felony counts, has conceded he shot the president and the three other men who were wounded in a fusillade of shots outside the Washington Hilton Hotel on March 30, 1981. But he claims he was insane and thus not legally responsible.

The judge still must decide the fundamental question of whether Hinckley should have to prove that he was insane at the time of the shooting or whether it's the prosecution's job to show beyond a reasonable doubt that Hinckley was sane.

18,000 jam Kenan for concert

By LIZ LUCAS
Staff Writer

About 18,000 people filled Kenan Stadium Saturday for one big party under the sun. Equipped with everything from towels, suntan oil and six-packs, to fried chicken and sandwiches, the crowd settled back to rock away the afternoon with Donnie Iris, Joan Jett and the Blackhearts, and Hall and Oates as hosts.

"Chapel Thrill was a complete success," said Wes Wright, Chapel Thrill Committee chairman. "We haven't closed the books yet, but it looks like we made between $23,000 and $28,000," he said.

No arrests were made during the concert, said William Weathersby, committee person in charge of security.

Besides great music, the outdoor concert provided a final chance for students to relax and take it easy in the sun before exams. With beer flowing freely and temperatures climbing into the upper 70s, students let themselves go, dancing and clapping in the stands, and singing along with the groups.

Some students fared less well, being slowed down by injuries. "Sixty-nine people were treated for injuries," Wright said, adding that he knew of no serious injuries. "Most were related to drinking too much, with possibly a few heat strokes and a few sprained ankles from walking in the stands. A few may have gotten bumps from beer cans being thrown," he said.

Wright said these injuries were comparable to the ones which occurred at the 1980 Chapel Thrill, with only four more this year than were suffered at the previous concert. Reports from North Carolina Memorial Hospital were unavailable Sunday night.

"The atmosphere was pretty wild—everyone had their coolers and was feeling good," said Jerry McMahan, a freshman from Wilmington. "The music was better than I expected. This was the first one (Chapel Thrill concert) I'd been to. It was really great. The weather couldn't have been any better, either."

The groups performing at Chapel Thrill "really thought it was fun," Wright said. "They thought the crowd's attitude was super—that everybody loved everybody."
