

"Some BSM members may have perceived the CGC as being antagonistic, which might explain their unwillingness to respond." He also recommended that the BSM try again in the future to return the Black Ink to full funding.

Hughes said he was given only two minutes to speak at the meeting. "I don't know what happened, Charlie Madison (CGC Finance Committee chairman) mentioned the transfers in the opening statement, and this opened up a lot of questions from the members."

Madison said everything was "brought out and discussed at the meeting, but there was some confusion over how many issues would be printed." He said that the $700 transfer was necessary because not enough issues were printed during the past year.

"We felt it (the transfer of funds) was becoming a problem with the Black Ink, so we decided to cut their budget."

All transfers must be approved by the Finance Committee chairman and the student body treasurer. While the Black Ink transfer was approved, Hughes said, it became the focus of debate among council members.

"I did explain to them what went on (with the transfer of funds), but they didn't listen. They just let themselves continue the misunderstanding," he said.

"There were no anti-Black Ink feelings during the meeting," Chiulli said. "From the information we were given, we felt that it was necessary to cut their budget."

Chiulli said that although the Black Ink editor and business manager had cited specific publishing problems, they presented no corrections or denials of the information discussed at the meeting.

Black Ink editor Ramona Brown said she had a chance to address the full CGC, but the members did not seem to understand the purposes of the paper.

"The budget cut will result in cutbacks in the number of issues and in circulation," she said. "We won't have a chance for advancement in becoming like other campus newspapers."

Hughes said the amount allocated for next year "is just enough to get by with. There's no leeway for excessive funds."

The CGC postponed voting on the 1982-1983 Undergraduate Honor Court appointees after CGC member Garth Dunklin (District 11) told the council he had heard allegations against one of the appointees which would prevent his serving on the court.

"One name was brought to my attention by someone as having been involved—at his place of work—in 'theft,'" he said. Dunklin did not name either the nominee or the source of allegations.

"I think there is some harm in passing this bill if we have evidence that (the appointee) might not be qualified," said CGC member Tony Boon (District 3).

The summer CGC will vote on the Honor Court appointments after the allegations have been investigated.

In other business, the CGC defeated a bill to allot $172 to the Black Student Movement for a file cabinet and awards for black seniors.

The Finance Committee had recommended allotting the money for the awards.

The awards are not BSM awards, but are open to all black seniors at the University, Madison said. "The reason we (the Finance Committee) gave this money to the BSM is that the committee (sponsoring the awards) is not a recognized campus organization."

But Madison could not tell the council what the committee was called, and the council voted to delete the $110 for the awards.

"It seems to me the thrust of the whole year was to ease the racial tensions on campus," said CGC member Susan Sparks (District 9). "I think this is going to more or less aggravate the differences between them (the races)."

The CGC allotted $800 to Student Government's Executive Branch for telephone cost increases and for costs incurred by a Student Government-sponsored seminar on black/white relations.

Student Body Treasurer Brent Clark told the council the money was needed because former Student Body President Scott Norberg had promised an honorarium to a professor who spoke to the seminar without asking the CGC for the money.

The CGC also established the 1982 Summer Campus Governing Council, which consists of all CGC members who will be at the University during the two summer school sessions.

there was a living God, I was going to give my life to him."

"I didn't know anything about being a Christian," he said. "But the moment I inclined my heart to God when God in his sovereignty began to operate." Darville knew about Jesus historically, but God sent various people to tell him what following Jesus meant, he said.

In the summer of 1978, Darville said he was "born again." "I came into an intimate, personal relationship with God." From that point, he said he realized he had a reason for living.

"I had given my life to a lot of things but everything I had given my life to disappointed me. I finally realized that if I gave myself completely and wholly to the purposes of God that I wouldn't be disappointed.

"God is now apprehending men and women who will give themselves to his purpose. The decade of the '80s are going to prove to be the greatest years for the harvest of the Kingdom of God—and I intend to be right in the middle of it."

"I'm not leaving until this campus bows its knees to Jesus!"

affairs and have become much more active in the community, Cleveland said.

"I've found that generally, the representation of different interests in the community is better than I ever would have suspected," he said.

Cleveland said he attributed much of the progressive spirit of Chapel Hill and Carboro local governments to the rapid transfusion in the population.

"Politics change faster here," Cleveland said. "We don't have a fixed society."

The same population does not remain in Chapel Hill for extended periods and therefore interests and concerns of voters fluctuate. However, as the growth rate of the University tapers off a more established and matured constituency will develop, Cleveland said.

We think summer work ought to be PROFITABLE and provide GOOD EXPERIENCE.

We're not the only ones. Among thousands of college students questioned three factors stand out. They want: (1) the opportunity to generate a good income (2) to gain experience that translates meaningfully into the career job market, and (3) to experience the adventure of living and working in a different part of the country.

For 114 years Southwestern has provided summer work for outstanding college students. We sell high quality books to families in their homes. Over the last 5 years about 500 University of North Carolina students have participated in the Southwestern program. (For 1982 more than 100 UNC students will be selected for the Southwestern program.)

WHAT STUDENTS LIKE ABOUT THE SOUTHWESTERN PROGRAM

- * Competing with students from more than 500 other colleges
- * A chance to live and work with friends for the summer
- * Excellent financial opportunity
- * See a different part of the United States.
- * Gain valuable work experience

WHAT EMPLOYERS LIKE ABOUT SUTDENTS WITH SOUTHWESTERN EXPERIENCE

- * Demonstrated skills in selling
- * Demonstrated ability to work with different types of people ... age, education, socioeconomic, etc.
- * Demonstrated ability to self-motivate
- * Demonstrated maturity, self-reliance and self-confidence
- * Demonstrated desire to undertake difficult and challenging tasks

If you think the summer of 1982 is time to take a step toward financial independence and to gain valuable work experience, come by for an interview.
