Summer albums

New sounds in rock

By GUHA SHANKAR

Summer school doesn't have to be a drag. True, it's been a mere two weeks since we agonized through finals and here it is time to go to classes again. But one way to ease the pain is to check out the latest album releases from some familiar and not-so-familiar names on the rock circuit. Here is a guide to some of the newest offerings:

music

XTC, English Settlement—There are two versions of this album; one is a two-record import, the other an abbreviated American release. The import is far more preferable since it has five songs not to be found on the domestic copy. The four-man English group covers a lot of territory in terms of both style and content. Songs about troubles in suburbia, political and social conflicts, and the shortcomings of personal relationships all share equal time. The music runs the range from hard rock to ska to pop to tribal rhythms. There is no one way to categorize this band. And, after all, who needs to when they make music this well?

Talking Heads, The Name of This Band Is Talking Heads—This double album retrospective of the group's career captures them in full flight from their beginnings as a quartet in 1977 to the expanded nine-member "Super Heads" of the present. The band's uncanny ability to incorporate a variety of sounds and styles is well-documented here. Highlights include David Byrne's hyper-paranoid singing, Adrian Belew's guitar workouts, and the soulful back-up vocals of Nona Hendryx and Dolette MacDonald. Even though this is a live album, there is no loss of clarity or sound, and the band is consistently excellent.

Madness, Complete Madness—These guys are at the top of the charts in England but are relatively unknown Stateside. This is unfortunate, because their lively mixture of ska, irrepressible humor, and witty lyrics is very good stuff. With luck, this greatest hits album will expose them to a wider audience.

New releases to watch for: The Clash, Combat Rock (already on the shelves); Pete Townshend, Chinese Eyes; King Crimson, Beat; Adrian Belew, The Lone Rhino.
