Legislators support higher drinking age

Martin Lancaster

Local legislators defended raising the state's drinking age at a Student Government forum Thursday afternoon. And public sentiment favors increasing the age from 18 to 21, Rep. Martin Lancaster, the bill's sponsor, Orange County Reps. Anne Barnes and Joe Hackney said they supported raising the minimum drinking age, but were undecided whether that age should be 19 or 21.

"I've got an open mind on the age," Barnes, a Democrat, told about 40 students in the Union auditorium, "And I'd be in favor of a single age for all alcohol be it 19, 21, 25 or whatever."

Lancaster, a Wayne County Democrat and a member of the Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving, said if a vote were taken in the General Assembly today, the minimum age probably would go to 21.

In November the task force recommended raising the age to 19, a move Gov. Jim Hunt favors. A new minimum drinking age is part of the Safe Roads Act of 1983, a package of legislation designed to revise and tighten drunken driving laws. A vote is expected by mid-February. Several students criticized any increased drinking age.

And the chairman of Student Government's State and National Affairs Committee called for stricter enforcement of current Driving Under the

"The drinking problem crosses all age groups, and I think this was ignored in the (DUI) bills," said Steve Langman, chairman of the Student Government committee. "What we need is stricter punishment under current laws and not the punishment of those of us who use alcohol respon-

Langman said SG would oppose efforts to raise the age. Before the meeting, he said a petition was being circulated on campus and when more than 2,000 signatures were collected, it would be taken to the Legislature. But Hackney said most Orange County residents favored increasing the age. And Lancaster said state-wide sentiment was for 21, noting that a recent poll taken by The Charlotte Observer found 74 percent of North Carolinians in favor of 21.

Lancaster said the task force chose 19 over 21 by one vote. He said raising the drinking age to 19 would remove high school students from others who could supply them alcohol.

"In the last two years, more people have been killed by drunken drivers in this country than died in Vietnam," Lancaster said. "It is time to stop the carnage or the 'socially accepted murder' as our governor calls it." Students criticized the proposed age change on Constitutional grounds. "We're responsible enough to go to war, register for the draft or vote, but not drink?" one student asked. But Lancaster called drinking a privilege, and he cited Constitutionallyrequired minimum ages for certain government offices as the basis for his

Others were critical of the proposed dram shop law which would hold bar and restaurant owners civilly liable for damage caused by their customers who later drove while intoxicated.

Barnes and Hackney said they favored the dram shop law although it might be amended.

Care is being taken to avoid problems with alcohol consumption, Phillips said. Students must be 18 to purchase tickets and identification will be checked at bars, he said, while public consumption laws will be observed on Franklin Street as usual.

At six of the bars, alternative beverages will be available, Phillips said.

"Originally, you had to drink to participate. Now we can include a lot more people." The party will begin at 3 p.m. on Feb. 4 and end when participating merchants close. The ticket will be good at Linda's until 8 p.m., at Looking Glass until 1 a.m. and at Spanky's between 3 and 4:30 p.m.

Tickets will be available in the Pit from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today and next week and in Suite A of the Carolina Union from 200 5 p.m. everyday next week.

WASHINGTON - Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker told Congress Thursday that the nation is poised for a sustained economic recovery, but the huge federal deficit still "clouds the future."

"The bigger the deficit, the more pressure there will be on interest rates," Volcker said, adding that high interest rates "will work against growth in business investment and housing," hampering recovery.

Volcker, in testimony before the Joint Economic Committee, did not offer specific suggestions for whittling the deficits that many economists say could climb to $200 billion a year and above if no action is

The Federal Reserve Board's main economic task is to try to steer the nation's money supply so it grows enough to allow the economy to expand but not so much as to reignite inflation. And, in general, members of the committee seemed sympathetic with Volcker's efforts.

WASHINGTON - President Reagan's suggestion to abolish the corporate income burial on Thursday, and he delivered the eulogy: "I said yesterday I would kick myself for saying that. I have."

But even as the chief executive and his aides scrambled to put the idea to rest, congressional Democrats were poking fun at it. "On the same day that the president sat down to drink with the working men of Boston," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, "he showed his heart was still in the corporate boardroom."

The president noted he had predicted he probably would regret saying there "isn't any justification" for the corporate tax, a statement made in a meeting with Boston businessmen on Wednesday - after, indeed, he sipped a beer in an Irish bar in a blue-collar district.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., Reagan's closest friend in Congress, said the remark was "something obviously that came off the top of his head. ... He didn't intend to reflect policy at all."

Democrats, meanwhile, had a field day with the notion of abandoning the corporate income tax, which accounts for an estimated $58.3 billion or 9 percent of all federal tax
