Salary freeze costs UNC 20 employees

By KELLY SIMMONS

The freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries cost the University of North Carolina's School of Medicine 20 staff members and the state at least $400,000 since it went into effect July 1, 1982, Dr. Stuart Bondurant, Dean of the medical school, said recently.

Bondurant said that in the spring of 1982, the school requested $864,000 from the state for a salary increase for nurses. The request was denied and the school was forced to pay $1.2 million in overtime and to hire nurses from nursing pools, he said.

Salary levels in the School of Medicine were not strong compared to regional standards, and pay for most faculty in UNC's clinical departments was lower than one-third of the region, he

Only 28 percent of the medical school's faculty salaries were paid with state funds, Bondurant said, so raises could have continued dur-

In his recent State of the State Address, Gov. Jim Hunt said his top priority would be lifting the salary freeze for teachers and state employees. He also said the state's highway system would be an important issue this year. "We cannot afford to let our hard-earned tax dollars that we send to Washington go to build roads in other states," he said.

The salary freeze, which went into effect July

Hunt has predicted an 8 percent to 9 percent increase in tax revenue during the next year, enough to lift the freeze. The cost of removing the freeze was estimated at $100 million.

Another $100 million is needed by the Transportation Dept. in order to match federal highway funds. In the past, the state has been able to use a five-year bond issue to provide the funds. The bonds, however, expire in July.

Despite Hunt's estimated 8.8 percent growth in revenue during the 1983-84 fiscal year, the outlook for North Carolina is not as gloomy as it first appears, Thad Beyle, UNC professor of political science, said.

"We're not as bad off as a lot of other states," he said, citing New York and California as states where revenues have dropped sharply. "Hunt's been able to contain things by not allocating all that was passed by the General Assembly." Beyle said 6 percent cutbacks were put into effect early enough so that the state would not face a major fiscal crisis.

UNC political science professor Richardson Preyer said the problem with the state budget was that it had to be balanced. "You can't get over places by the deficit the way the federal government does," he said.

Preyer said if Hunt had been overlyoptimistic in his estimated revenue and the budget does fall short, programs would have to be cut or taxes would be raised. The government was reluctant to raise taxes because of the recession, Preyer said.

Although the legislature has rejected an increased alcohol tax in the past, Brent Hackney, Hunt's press secretary, said the governor strongly supported it as a means for revenue this year. "I don't know how well it will go over in the Senate," he said. "But it's still on the table if they want to act on it."

The alcohol tax would raise about $50 million by increasing the tax on liquor from 22.5 percent to 33.75 percent and the tax on a six-pack of beer from 30 cents to 45 cents.

The alcohol tax would be a good idea, Preyer said, since the federal tax on alcohol was lower than the federal tobacco tax. "For us to raise it (the alcohol tax) is not unfairly penalizing alcohol," he said.

Although general tax collections in December 1982 were only up 2.6 percent over December 1981, Hackney said Hunt did not support a general tax increase. General tax collections for the year were $1.6 million, short of the 8.9 percent increase projected in Hunt's 1982-83 budget. But Hackney said, "The economy is weak now, and the governor doesn't think it's the right time to put an extra tax on the people."

A proposal to increase the tax on gasoline by 2 cents was rejected by Hunt in light of the 3-cent per gallon tax which the General Assembly approved in 1981.

Beyle agreed that a general tax increase would not be a good idea for the governor to propose. He said the alcohol tax (Hunt's idea) should be imposed and the profits used to fund the proposed Safe Roads Act, an act designed to tighten DUI laws, and the remaining funds used for highway maintenance.

"He would be killed with it (general tax increase) if he's going to run against Jesse Helms," Beyle said. He said the reason Hunt's 1981 gasoline tax had not met with opposition was because the tax went into effect at the same time gasoline prices decreased.

Another suggestion to increase revenues was a 1-cent sales tax increase. This extra revenue could be used to fund schools and community clean water acts, pay state employees and repair highways, Beyle said. He said, however, that people did not like taking money from a general tax and putting it into highways.

Preyer agreed that profits from a sales tax should not be used for highways, but said there were exceptions.

"User taxes ought to pay for roads," he said. "But if you need to use sales taxes to match federal funds, it would seem justified. It would be a shame to lose large amounts of federal funds because you couldn't put up a small amount of state funds."

Several nonmonetary issues will occupy the General Assembly for the next couple of months, Beyle said. The legislature is not expected to reach a decision concerning the budget until late April or May because of changing economic conditions.

"As the economy changes, we'll get current readings," Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, said. "It's a long, involved process and we're just at the beginning of it."

Barnes said she suspected there would be a bill to propose an alcohol tax increase which she said she would support.

"I'm certainly not jumping at the bit to raise anybody's taxes on anything," she said. "But I'd like to lift the freeze (on state employees' salaries); it's a high priority for me."

Lifting the freeze on state employees' and teachers' salaries was an issue Preyer said he was interested in. "Teachers are grossly underpaid," he said. "If we want to give them the respect and dignity their job deserves, we've got to pay

TEL AVIV, Israel - The Israeli army said it reached an agreement with U.S. authorities Thursday reaffirming Israel's right to patrol in the area of Beirut where three Israeli tanks were challenged by a pistol-waving U.S. Marine.

Marine Capt. Charles B. Johnson told a Beirut news conference that when he jumped on the lead tank Wednesday he grabbed the Israeli commander and told him that if the tanks wanted to advance, "You're going to have to kill me."

Bushwhackers who have attacked more than 500 trucks during a violent truckers strike renewed their assaults Thursday, and food brokers from St. Louis to Boston began feeling the pinch of shortages.

Shipments of fresh fruit and vegetables dwindled, shipping costs went up, and officials warned consumers to be prepared to pay more at the checkout counter.

In North Carolina, bullets hit a truck carrying radioactive material in Sampson County, bringing the number of trucks shot at in the state during the independent truckers' strike to 12, police said Thursday.

RALEIGH - Parts of the proposed dram shop statute "might not have to be as rigid" if other ways are found to keep beer and wine away from minors, Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday.

One additional measure Hunt said he would be willing to consider would increase penalties for attempting to buy alcohol with a false identification card. Hunt said the penalty could be loss of the driver's license for a period of time.

Under the proposal, bar owners and convenience store operators would be held civilly liable for selling alcohol to underage or drunken customers who later are involved in WASHINGTON - The first comprehensive alternative to President Reagan's threeday-old budget surfaced in Congress Thursday, a Republican plan that would trim the defense buildup, boost energy taxes and spread this year's 10 percent income tax cut over two years.

Leaders of both parties, meanwhile, set out to develop jobs programs, something Reagan has so far resisted.

WASHINGTON - A federal judge rejected on Thursday the Reagan administration's attempt to sidestep a contempt of Congress case against Environmental Protection Agency chief Anne M. Gorsuch. That sent the Justice Department scurrying for compromise in the constitutional con-

The House voted 259 to 105 to cite the EPA administrator for contempt after she refused to give sensitive law enforcement documents on hazardous waste dumps to a House subcommittee. Just after the vote, the Justice Department filed its first suit ever against Congress, naming the House, Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, committee chairmen and the chamber's officers as defendants.

Smith ruled in favor of the Congress two days after oral argument on the House's motion to dismiss the lawsuit.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador - An army battalion regained control of Berlin with little fighting Thursday, after leftist guerrillas pulled out of the biggest city they have captured and claimed they fulfilled their objectives. They held it for two days.
