

New subcommittee to be given trial run

By EVAN TRULOVE
Staff Writer

A subcommittee giving students, faculty and alumni a voice in the UNC undergraduate admissions process has been formed on a two-year trial basis.

The Jan. 1 formation of the Student-Faculty-Alumni Advisory Subcommittee for the University's Office of Undergraduate Admissions fulfills a campaign promise of Student Body President Mike Vandenberg.

"I felt like the students should have an impact on the composition of the student body," Vandenberg said. "Through this subcommittee, the students will have more influence on University interaction with applicants and the types of students making up the University community."

William H. Graves, associate dean of the General College and chairman of the subcommittee, said the original subcommittee comprised only students, and was expanded to include faculty and alumni for differing opinions.

The subcommittee will assist admissions officials in recruiting applicants and advising them on issues involving processing applications and policy matters, Graves said. The subcommittee also will advise the admissions office on brochure information, publicity and the design of applications.

The subcommittee will help the admissions procedure by questioning controversial issues of admissions policies concerning minorities and the out-of-state quota, said Dennis Whittle, chairman of Student Government's Academic Procedures Committee, who helped form the subcommittee.

By assisting in recruitment, the subcommittee could help recruit qualified and talented students who might otherwise go to school outside North Carolina, Whittle said.

Subcommittee members include two representatives from the Student Body, the chairman of the Admissions Committee from a list of at least four nominees submitted by the student body president; three faculty members involved in undergraduate teaching, selected by the chairman of the Admissions Committee, with consideration to faculty members who have recently had children enrolled in the University; an officer of the General Alumni Association chosen by the president of the Alumni Association; and a faculty member of the Advisory Committee of Undergraduate Admissions, who shall serve as chairman of the subcommittee. The director of the admissions office will serve ex officio.

The members of the 1983 subcommittee are: Justin Gottlieb, a sophomore from Winston-Salem; Patricia Kornegay, a junior from Charlotte; Stirling Haig, Doris Betts and John Nelson, undergraduate professors; Elizabeth Dawd, officer of the General Alumni Association; William H. Graves, a member of the Advisory Committee of Undergraduate Admissions; and Richard G. Cashwell, director of the UNC Office of Undergraduate Admissions.

The subcommittee will meet at least twice each semester. Subcommittee members will not have access to applicants' data, and will not participate in individual cases involving exceptions to admissions policies.

Whittle said the success of the subcommittee depended upon the interest it generated and the good recommendations the subcommittee made.

"I think the subcommittee will be useful and can investigate some controversial issues, he said. "Pressure should be kept on the Admissions Committee as a whole so that at the end of our two-year trial term, the committee will not die because responsibility was not delegated to the subcommittee."

RALEIGH — Amendments to the dram shop portion of Gov. Jim Hunt's drunken driving package were drafted Tuesday and may be considered today by a state Senate subcommittee, its chairman said.

Meanwhile, the House and Senate sponsors of the legislation said they hoped to bring the bill to the floors of both chambers by next week, though other lawmakers were skeptical that it could be done so soon.

Senate sources said the amendments drafted Tuesday deal with the statute's most controversial portions — those mandating insurance policies for establishments selling alcoholic beverages and extending liability created by the statute to establishments that sell alcohol for off-premises consumption.

The bill would make those who sell alcoholic beverages subject to civil suits if they serve people already drunk or underaged who later cause accidents — whether the beverages were sold for on-premises consumption as in a restaurant or for off-premises drinking such as by a grocery or convenience store.

It would require that any business selling alcohol be insured for at least $300,000.

RALEIGH — Legislative leaders, looking for funding for the 1983-84 budget, said they would use lower staff revenue estimates instead of Gov. Jim Hunt's projections, forcing them to find ways to cut spending by 3 percent.

Meanwhile, leaders challenged revenue collection statistics released Monday. The preliminary Revenue Department figures showed that January collections rose 15.5 percent above collections in January 1982.

Legislative analysts reported that adjusted collections for January were 10 percent instead of 15.5 percent.

Sen. Elton Edwards, D-Guilford, one of the budget leaders, told members of the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee to use staff estimates that revenues would grow in the next fiscal year by 7 percent.

Hunt based his budget on estimates that revenues will grow

8.9 percent, a difference of $92.7 million, almost enough money to lift the freeze on state workers' and teachers' salaries.

To make up the $92.7 million difference, Edwards said the committee has three choices — reduce proposed spending by about 3 percent, keep the freeze or raise taxes.

In other legislative action:

— A bill to shorten the length of terms of University of North Carolina Board of Governors was sent to a subcommittee of the Senate Rules Committee.

The measure would allow board members to serve two consecutive four-year terms instead of the current two eight-year terms.

— Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, criticized a bill introduced by Sen. William Martin, D-Guilford, to give all 16 University of North Carolina campuses access to a fund created by the estates of people who died before 1971 and left no will.

In the past, only six predominantly white campuses have received money from the fund. All 16 campuses get money from a fund created after 1971 with money from the estates of people who died with no will.

Martin's bill also asks the Board of Governors to try to make up for the lack of funds to the 10 schools from the pre-1971 fund.

— A Senate committee wanted to commend the National Collegiate Athletic Association for strengthening academic standards for athletes but was cautious about whether the standards would discriminate against minorities.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, wanted the Higher Education Committee to commend the NCAA but said he had received questions about whether the standards for Scholastic Aptitude Test scores discriminate against blacks.

Martin, the state's only black senator, said there was a chance that such a resolution "would be seen as racist."

He said there are serious questions whether the SAT is biased racially and noted that colleges recruiting minorities occasionally waive SAT requirements for admissions.

But Martin said he felt blacks could support higher course requirements and grade averages so the committee sent the matter to a subcommittee for more work.

A Rutherfordton truck driver said his truck's tires were shot out early Tuesday, boosting to 24 the number of trucks hit by gunfire on North Carolina highways during the nationwide independent truckers strike.

Despite sporadic reports of shootings and rock throwings, highway patrol officials said that truck traffic is "almost back to normal" on state roads. Reports of violent incidents have dropped from a high of 16 last Wednesday to two on Tuesday.

WASHINGTON — State Department officials said Tuesday that political repression around the world continued on a broad scale in 1982, with a number of nondemocratic governments — both friendly and unfriendly — routinely denying the most fundamental human freedoms.

In its annual report on the state of human rights, the department assessed 162 countries in 1,323 pages and concluded there was little or no change in most countries.

In general, the report indicated that politically motivated killings were more likely to occur in rightist dictatorships than in Communist countries.

PARIS — Vice President George Bush said Tuesday the United States and Western Europe are united in their resolve to confront a Soviet military build up and in their efforts to pull the West out of an economic recession.

It was the first time during his 12-day tour of Europe that Bush has touched on some of the serious disagreements between Washington and its European allies on trade, protectionism and economic policy.

France has consistently backed the U.S. position at the Geneva arms reduction talks and has loudly supported the plan to deploy 572 intermediate-range missiles in Europe if those talks do not lead to an agreement.

"The Western alliance is dedicated and united in its efforts to preserve the peace in Europe by maintaining the balance of power between East and West," Bush told a news conference.

Lecture series to focus on current issues

By KAREN MOORE
Staff Writer

"Lebanon: Shattered State in the Middle East," a lecture delivered in Dey Hall Tuesday night by professor Nafez Nazal of Birzeit University in Jordan, was the second in a series of lectures designed to heightened UNC students' and faculty awareness of current issues.

"Great Decisions '83," a lecture series on a wide variety of foreign policy topics, will be given each Tuesday at 7:30 in Toy Lounge of Dey Hall, said Craig Auchter, coordinator of the series.

And beginning Thursday, Feb. 18, discussion groups will meet in the Chapel of the Cross Church at 4 p.m. to discuss that week's lecture, he said.

Other assemblies and broadcasts also will highlight the series' topics and speeches, Auchter said. Chapel Hill High School has scheduled several special assemblies with the lecture speakers, and WUNC radio station also will interview some of the speakers.

The speakers for the Great Decisions '83 lectures were chosen by Professor Joseph Tulchin, director of the UNC Office of International Programs and Professor James Leutze, chairman of the curriculum of peace, war and defense, Auchter said.

"The speakers were chosen according to their expertise with regard to each topic in the series," he said.

The Foreign Policy Association of New York, which is sponsoring the lectures at UNC, is sponsoring similar talks across the country, Auchter said.

The FPA also is conducting a national poll to determine public opinion on the issues discussed in the lecture series. "The poll will be analyzed by public opinion experts at Columbia University and subsequently presented to Congress, the executive branch (of the federal government) and the media," he said.

Each Great Decisions '83 book sold for this lecture series contains a ballot for the poll, and the books are available in the office of international programs.

The rest of the Great Decisions '83 lectures are scheduled as follows: Feb. 15, "Trade and Unemployment — Global Bread-and-Butter Issues" with a UNC faculty panel; Feb. 22, "Africa's Economic Squeeze;" March 15, "Southeast Asia;" and March 31, "West Germany and the U.S."
