

Have clothes, will travel

By KELLY SIMMONS

You've made your reservations, settled all travel details and mapped the way to Fort Lauderdale. Even your extra Christmas fat has finally been worked off.

But have you thought about what to wear during your spring fling in sunny Florida? Besides Hawaiian Tropic and Ray Bans there are a few other things you'll need on your vacation.

Of course the obvious, for both male and female: at least one swimsuit, several short-sleeve shirts, a few pairs of shorts, jeans and tennis shoes.

Fashion conscious males, be sure to pack your day-glo madras plaid pants with matching polo shirts; and of course, for that "pick-up night" on the town—loafers; to be worn without socks.

Cut-off Duckheads make an excellent pair of shorts. Worn with a Hawaiian print shirt (untucked), Topsiders and Ray Bans, you're sure to be a hit on the beach. Don't forget the long-sleeve Ocean Pacific and Hawaiian Tropic T-shirts.

Females, your wardrobe can be fairly flexible. Swimsuits by day, and be sure to take all your sundresses to wear at night. These revealing dresses are an excellent way to show off your new tan.

For a more casual look, don't forget Bermuda shorts, especially ones with all the cute little frogs and hippos on them, with matching polo shirts. Sandals, both dressy and casual, should be included in your wardrobe. Leave the clogs at home, except for all of you who don't own anything else.

Seriously, when planning for a week's stay in Florida be sure to take several cotton shirts and a couple pairs of lightweight pants. Matching shirts which can be worn interchangeably with a skirt, pants and shorts would save space and still provide several different outfits.

A good idea for packing your clothes to keep them practically wrinkle-free is to put a piece of plastic wrap between each layer of clothes in your suitcase. This will keep clothes neat for as long as they are crammed together.

As a general rule, no one should travel without at least one Carolina shirt. Wear it out on the beach and show everyone who the real "Spring Breakers" of 1983 are.
