President Friday solicits funds for UNC system

By CHERYL ANDERSON

UNC System President William C. Friday has been before the state legislature's joint appropriations committee for the past two weeks soliciting for funds for the University system.

The UNC system, the second largest department in state government, would receive about $606.3 million of the General Fund operating money in 1983-1984 if North Carolina legislators approve Gov. Jim Hunt's 1983-1985 budget, The proposal was presented to legislators

UNC-CH officials have recommended $153 million to go to the school for 1983-1984 as compared to last term's $150 million. The main reason for the slight increase is to offset the rising costs of inflation, according to Farris Womack, UNC-CH vice chancellor for business School officials recently concluded an eightday presentation of the budget to the Joint House and Senate Appropriations Committee, Friday said. "I found them (the sessions) very helpful and, I think, instructive to the people who were there," he said. The proposal sessions resume in another two or three weeks.

The continuation budget includes funds proposed for ongoing academic affairs programs, health affairs programs and area health education centers, Womack said. The continuation budget is that money "required to keep in place what you have right then," he said.

"At the present time it does not appear that tax collections will be sufficient to fund the appropriations for all the programs in the proposed budget," Womack added.

The two-year budget proposal for the 16-campus University system calls for a 1.3 percent increase each of the two years. The increase is mainly to offset inflationary costs and to allow additional funding for library books, Friday said. The proposal does not include expansion funds, he said.

General Fund money is comprised of money from sales and income tax revenues and is used to support all N.C. state agencies except the highway system, which has a separate budget, said Bruce Harrington, state budget admini trator for education in Raleigh.

The UNC system draws the majority of its funds from the state (General Fund), the federal government (research grants) and tuition and fees, Harrington said. In the past the system has received about 16 percent of the General Fund money, he said. Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said it was difficult to determine how much of the proposed budget the UNC system would receive. The budget is now in the hands of the Appropriations Committee's Sub-Committee on Education, Hackney, a Chapel Hill resident, said.

The committee "has always looked favorably on funding the University as much as those appropriations are available, but it's just too early to tell," he said.

The proposed increase does not allow much for inflation, Harrington said. "There's very little flexibility in there," he said. "They (UNC system) will more than likely get what's been recommended in the continuation budget." The General Assembly could cut or increase the budget, Harrington said. Presently, though, the General Assembly is searching state government for areas in which funding can be cut, he said.

Friday said he was unsure if the UNC system's budget would be cut.

One major change in the budget for UNC-CH is for utilities, Womack said. "Utility costs are rising at substantial rates," he said. Increases were also requested for food, drugs, medical supplies, library books, service and maintenance contracts and telephone service.

State agencies are waiting for the General Assembly's decision on the budget proposal before they ask for money to expand programs, Harr-

RALEIGH - Amendments that could weaken the dram shop portion of Gov. Jim Hunt's drunken driving package will go before a state Senate subcommittee Thursday, sources said Wednesday.

Sources said the compromise proposals emerged from intense negotiations between Hunt administration officials, lawmakers and lobbyists on both sides of the issue that has emerged as the legislation's biggest stumbling block.

The subcommittee will consider three versions of the dram shop statute, including the present one that would make alcoholic beverage dealers subject to civil suits if they sell to the underaged or to people already drunk who later cause traffic accidents. That proposal has come under sharp attack from lobbyists from businesses, who say it puts an excessive burden on them.

The amendments include: · Imposing civil liability on those who sell to people already intoxicated when they do their drinking at the establishment, and on those who sell to the underaged regardless of where they · Removing all reference to customers already drunk and imposing civil liability only on those who sell to minors, whether they drink on or off premises.

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Cabinet on Wednesday reviewed a damaging judicial report on the Beirut massacre, and an official who attended the meeting claimed Defense Minister Ariel Sharon urged the ministers to remove him from office as recommended by the commis-

The Cabinet ended its second emergency session in two days after threeand-a-half hours. It did not announce any response to the suggestions made by the commission that investigated the Beirut massacre, but scheduled a third session for Thursday afternoon.

While the ministers met, more than 1,000 people gathered in front of the Cabinet building, chanting their support for Sharon and the government.

WINSTON-SALEM - The federal government plans to propose criminal charges in the 1979 slayings of five anti-Ku Klux Klansmen in Greensboro, according to a Klansman who taped a Justice Department lawyer.

Klansman John T., Harris of Wilmington said civil rights division attorney Dan Bell told him last week that "we are considering who to recommend to the grand jury to indict" in connection with the Nov. 3, 1979, killings.

The jury is probing the possibility of federal civil rights charges in the shooting deaths of five Communist Workers Party members, which occurred during a CWP "Death to the Klan" raily. Six Klansmen and Nazis were found innocent of state murder charges a year after the slayings.
