Sweep final home meet

Gymnasts winning with depth

From Staff Reports

Not too long ago, North Carolina's gymnastics scores were often an indicator of how two women, Karen Kaiser and Tammy Gilbert, could perform on a given day.

Not too long ago, Carolina's gymnastics scores were stable and holding firm in the 160s.

Now, the burden of scoring has left the shoulders of Kaiser and Gilbert. Gymnasts such as Christine Thorne and Anne Ruppert, combining with strong input from Elise Slobodin and Mickie Robinson, have formed a more balanced attack for UNC.

Now, the squad has firmly raised its average into the 170s.

That new-found depth was never more evident than last Saturday when the Tar Heels took four of the top five all-around spots in sweeping away three opponents.

Carolina tallied 171.15 points, followed by N.C. State at 167.05, East Tennessee State at 158.70 and Georgia College at 151.65.

This was the final home meet of the season, raising the Tar Heels' record to 8-3 overall.

UNC showed its muscle early on with an impressive team total of 43.95 on the vault, a full point better than the Wolfpack.

The meet was all but over following the bars, as the Tar Heels built up a 2.75-point advantage. Ruppert was tops in the event with a 9.05, while Gilbert managed 8.7, good for fifth.

UNC proved once again where its No. 1 strong point is by earning two scores of better than nine on the floor routines. Thorne was first with 9.1, while Kaiser was a close second at 9.05.

they did come away with three wins.

The Tar Heels shut down Baptist College on Friday and Saturday, rolling up 17 runs in 18 innings.

In an 8-2 win Friday, UNC pitcher Roger Williams was victorious in his first collegiate start. Jeff Hubbard hit the Baptist pitchers silly with a home run, a double and a triple.

In Saturday's 9-4 triumph, Brad Powell picked up the win for the Tar Heels, while Greg Schuler pounded the ball on four of five trips to the batter's box.

Chris Kahler went the distance on the mound Sunday, striking out 10 batters and walking only one in an 11-3 win over Armstrong State.

Hubbard was again in top form, connecting on all five tries at the plate, concluding a 28-run weekend for UNC

Chris Mand has been reaching new heights lately. The UNC pole vaulter recently was accepted to medical school and Saturday he won the Tar Heel Classic indoor track meet with a vault of 16-6, defeating Duke rival Terry Ransbury.

Mand is coming off ligament damage to his ankle, and Saturday's meet was only his second of the season. He nearly cleared 16-11, which would have sent him to the NAAs for the second straight year. But Mand still has two more chances to qualify.

"His comment to me was that he feels he can get it (qualify)," assistant coach Don Lockerbie said. "This (his vault of 16-6) is certainly gonna rev him up."

Other top finishers for North Carolina in the Tar Heel Classic were: Brett Plummer (second in the mile); Jeff Hyman, Mike Kominsky and Jack Morgan (fifth, sixth and seventh, respectively, in the mile); Bob Harrell (fifth in the 880); Brent Walker (fifth in the 60-yard high hurdles); Charles Plambeck (fifth in the pole vault); James Daye (fifth in the 1,000); Bill Will (fourth in the two-mile) and David Schnorrenberg (sixth in the two-mile).

UNC's Ron Erskine returns a shot during weekend action ... the Tar Heels swept by their opponents 8-0 and 9-1.

Tennis team romps in season opener

By LEW PRICE
Staff Writer

The UNC men's tennis team opened its season Sunday by beating UNC-Asheville 8-1. Not totally satisfied, they followed Monday with a 9-0 win over UNC-Charlotte.

Ron Erskine, playing number two, suffered the lone defeat, but he played with an injured knee which will keep him out of action for the next few matches.

In January the team learned they would be without the much anticipated services of Wayne Hearn, who is academically ineligible.

Coach Allen Morris and the rest of the team are optimistic, however, that this will be a good year.

"For these to be the first matches of the year I'm pretty pleased with the play," Morris said. "We have more depth and are probably better at the top than these teams."

Ken Whitaker, who has seen play at the four and five spots thus far, said these matches were not indicative of matches to come.

"I'm optimistic about our chances this year and feel we have a legitimate shot at the ACC," he said. "But these teams are not as strong and the competition will get tougher in the future."

In the UNC-Asheville match: Josh Sarter def. Maynard 6-7 (8-6), 6-2, 6-2; Ron Erskine lost to Cizek 6-1, 6-7 (7-5), 4-6; Ken Ludwig def. Muller 6-4, 6-1; John Grigg def. Ford 6-2, 6-2; Ken Whitaker def. Shofner 6-3, 6-1; and Jay Pulliam def. Goodman 6-1, 6-2.

Against UNC-Charlotte: Sarter def. Caldwell 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Ludwig def. Berry 7-5, 6-4; Grigg def. Holden 6-1, 6-2; Whitaker def. Hollingsworth 6-3, 6-3; Alderman def. Stewart 6-2, 6-0; and Eddie Stewart def. McElreath 7-5, 6-1.

State, Wake to host basketball tourney

The Associated Press GREENSBORO — Wake Forest and North Carolina State will co-host an annual college basketball doubleheader beginning in December 1983, officials announced Monday.

The "McDonalds Classic," sponsored by the national fast food chain, will pit the host teams against Virginia Tech and North Carolina-Charlotte in its inaugural year Dec. 2-3 in Greensboro Coliseum. Visiting teams will be changed every year.

Wake Forest Athletic Director Dr. Gene Hooks said the doubleheader was an attempt to replace the Big Four Tournament, which featured Wake Forest, N.C. State, Duke and North Carolina. It ended its 10-year run in 1980 when North Carolina pulled out of the tournament.

"We'll range out further than just this area of the country to find good opponents," said Hooks. "We have been talking to the Big Five in Philadelphia and the Big 10. We have contacted quite a number of schools about playing in the Classic."

Clemson tickets still available

Student tickets for Sunday's home basketball game against Clemson are still available. Students may pick up tickets from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the UNC ticket office in Carmichael Auditorium. I.D.'s and athletic passes must be presented.
