2/The Daily Tar Heel/Thursday, March 3, 1983 Nuclear proliferation is problem in third world

By CINDI ROSS Staff Writer

"The probability of a nuclear exchange between major powers is one in a million while the probability in Third World countries is more like one in a thousand," said James Leutze, chairman of the UNC peace, war and defense curriculum, Tuesday night.

Leutze, speaking on nuclear proliferation and deterrents, presented the fifth public forum in the "Great Decisions '83" series. Approximately 40 students and community members attended the forum held in Dey Hall's Toy Lounge.

"I consider nuclear proliferation to be a much greater problem than windows of vulnerability and freezes," said Leutze.

He said he saw two possibilities for proliferation in Third World countries. The quick method involves the theft or purchase of nuclear weapons from more developed countries. The second slower process is to develop nuclear weapons as a result of having nuclear power.

Concerning the two possibilities of proliferation, Leutze said, "I will predict that within the next 10 years either a terrorist group or a Third World nation will develop nuclear weapons.

"I think it is also highly likely that they will use them whether as a threat or in an actual explosion," he said. Leutze said that the reason Third World countries were so likely to develop and explode nuclear weapons was insecurity.

"The United States, the Soviet Union, France, England, Japan, China and India are now in the nuclear club," Leutze said. "And the possibility of doubling the group overnight is great." He said that Belgium, Holland, Italy, Poland or Czechoslovakia could easily produce a nuclear weapon in a year.

"But why don't they?" he asked. "Because they shelter under NATO or the Soviet Union and feel secure. Other countries feel relatively insecure."

The problem of arms control was discussed as a block to possible solutions. Leutze said that until the United States shows control, Third World countries would not seriously show control.

Leutze said that a direct and plausible way to deal with the problem was to increase the feeling of security in underdeveloped nations. He said that this should include giving military aid or improving the standard of living.

He said that the only workable solution in Western Europe was to provide more conventional weapons, thereby deterring the possibility of developing nuclear weapons.

"I think there are some bright lights on the issue," Leutze said. "It has been almost 10 years since the last country (India) developed nuclear weapons. I've been encouraged by the fact that other countries haven't headed. to proliferation.

"I'm glad that's been the case," he said. "I just hope it will continue."

Thoroughfare plan discussions are concluded

By KATHERINE FARLEY Staff Writer

The Chapel Hill Planning Board concluded discussions Tuesday evening about the thoroughfare plan, abandoning all ideas for a planned thoroughfare cutting through or near Mason Farm.

The thoroughfare plan, as originally drafted, proposed the extension of Parker Road. The Parker Road extension would have cut through Mason Farm, a biological research tract used by the University.

The board approved Tuesday consideration of alternative routes farther south from the original extension.

Alice Ingram, speaking before the board, proposed a loop road 2.5 miles farther south, a proposal which Transportation Planner Danny Pleasant criticized as being too expensive.

Board members also agreed to consider a second alternative route. A road cutting through Magnum Court in southeastern Chapel Hill was considered for long-range possibilities under the condition that additional research be conducted by state and local officials.

The Planning Board approved a dual access thoroughfare for the Parker Road area that would require the extension of Bayberry Drive.

Board members said a southern loop road should be considered because a dual access highway to Parker Road would not relieve traffic on the U.S. 15-501 Bypass. William Rohe, a Planning Board member, was not in agreement with other board members.

"We are throwing something up on the map for the sake of something on the map," Rohe said. The board should extend additional consideration to residents in the affected areas, he said.

At the Planning Board's meeting on Feb. 22, new evidence surfaced regarding a proposed west loop in Chapel Hill that would require the extension of Weaver Dairy Road.

The planning staff approved a new route Tuesday that would run east of the Weaver Dairy extension proposal.

Planning Board members Roscoe Reeve and Rohe recommended that the Town Council hold a public hearing to discuss the board's new proposals.

In other action, the board discussed a zoning change for a local fast-food restaurant. The board approved a request by Hardee's on West Franklin Street to tear down the existing structure and reconstruct a new one that includes a drive-through window.

Orange County has low unemployment

Orange County registered the lowest unemployment rate in the state January, with 3.9 percent of the work force without jobs, Dick Johnson, of the state's Public Information Bureau. said Wednesday.

The N.C. Employment Security Commission released statistics Tuesday for unemployment in January.

Post-holiday layoffs and poor weather conditions were blamed for the statewide increases in January unemployment, said Glenn last year with 32.1 percent, Johnson said. However, Dare County registered the greatest change between January 1982 and January 1983, he said. That county's figure jumped from 22.1 percent to 42.1 percent in these two months.

Orange County's jobless rate fluctuated last year from 3.6 percent in April and December to 4.5 percent in June.

In January 1982, Orange County's unemployment was 3.8 percent, representing 1,710 workers searching for jobs in that

WASHINGTON - The nation's governors, in a strong bipartisan showing, are plunging into the national budget debate with their demand for reductions in defense spending and increased taxes down the road to stem federal deficits.

The National Governors' Association voted 30-10 Tuesday to support a resolution that calls for holding deficits to 2 percent of the gross national product - or no more than $90 billion by 1988.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, was one of the 10 state leaders voting against the resolution. Spokesman Brent Hackney said Hunt agreed the nation's deficit must be cut.

Hunt also showed opposition last week to a nuclear freeze resolution pending before the state Legislature.

WASHINGTON - President Reagan offered "complete access" to documents Wednesday for congressional committees investigating the Environmental Protection Agency. But one committee chairman said Reagan still was imposing limits and called the offer "an unacceptable charade."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes announced Reagan's move in Santa Barbara, Calif., saying also that the president rejected the idea of an independent investigation of EPA and still has confidence in the agency's administrator, Anne McGill Burford.

But in an interview with The Associated Press, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III would not commit the administration to keeping Burford on the job permanently.

"There are no present plans" to fire the controversial administrator, Baker said. He also said the possibility that she was mismanaging the EPA had been discussed at the White House.

LONDON - Diplomatic maneuvering among the world's major oil producers moved Wednesday night to London, where ministers assembled in an attempt to prevent a price war.

Ministers from as many as seven nations are expected to attend an informal London meeting today. They include Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, whose country is the major producer in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

OPEC, which controlled oil prices in the 1970s, is threatened by competition from non-OPEC producers such as Britain and Norway, a declining petroleum market and internal rivalries within the 13-member cartel.

WASHINGTON - The Salvadoran government, increasingly on the defensive in its war with leftist insurgents, is considering moving up the date of its next election - a shift the Reagan administration is encouraging, officials said Wednesday.

The Salvadorans have scheduled elections for a new president and legislature in March 1984, but administration officials fear that the full year's wait will contribute to political bickering that will hamper the war effort.

At the State Department, spokesman John Hughes acknowledged that the United States has talked with Salvadoran authorities about the possibility of advancing the election.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica - Pope John Paul II arrived Wednesday with messages of hope and peace for Central America - a region shattered by violence that has killed 100,000 people in the past five years.

The pontiff's plane touched ground at 3:24 p.m. (4:24 p.m. EST) after a 14-hour flight from the Vatican with a stopover in Portugal. Sirens sounded to mark John Paul's arrival as his custom Alitalia jetliner taxied to the terrace.

Hundreds of thousands of residents of this heavily Roman Catholic nation of 2.5 million - an oasis of political calm in a troubled area - lent a festive atmosphere to the Lenten season, generally a time for penance for the

Bill and Sandra! Best Wishes, - The 'DTH' staff

Congratulations,

R. Jernigan, chairman of the state ESC. Even though the Orange County unemployment rate jumped 0.3 percent from December to January, the county still had the lowest jobless rate in January. Orange County had the lowest unemployment in the state last year with only 3.3 percent of the labor force unemployed, Johnson said. Graham County claimed the highest unemployment rate for month.

Johnson said that because Research Triangle Park provides so many jobs for area residents, Wake, Durham and Orange County unemployment will be consistently lower than unemployment in other N.C. counties.

"Improving weather and falling interest rates will hopefully decrease unemployment," he said.
