

Helms: early campaigns unsafe

By MICHAEL TOOLE
Staff Writer

The never-ending cycle of political campaigns is a major reason for the American public's lack of confidence in government, said state Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, in a speech to the Young Democrats Tuesday night.

"We've become a nation of full-time political office seekers and part-time political office holders," said Helms, a potential Democratic candidate for N.C. attorney general in 1984.

Helms said full-time candidates are damaging to the credibility of the entire political institution because their constant campaigning keeps them from doing their work.

Helms, who has not formally declared his candidacy, said beginning a campaign two to three years before an election was too early, so he would finish his job of representing Mecklenburg County before starting his bid for attorney general.

"When I run for attorney general, I want people to vote for me because they want me for attorney general, not because they want me the hell out of Mecklenburg County," Helms said.

No other candidates have formally entered the race, but Orange County District Attorney Wade Barber has expressed interest in running.

The full-time campaigns of political hopefuls pose two other problems in establishing public trust in the government, Helms said.

Helms said the large amount of money needed to engage in such a campaign limits the political process to frontrunners and the wealthy who can afford to run.

Full-time candidates also promote an avoidance of crucial issues because politicians fear that a stand on a controversial subject will hurt their chances for election, Helms said.

However, this strategy can backfire because voters can usually sift through doubletalk, Helms said.

"If you spend all your time worrying about the next election, there won't be a next election to worry about."

Helms said he was proud that North Carolina had the first Southern House to pass a nuclear freeze resolution, but he said he was saddened when the Senate watered down and tabled the freeze bill in the same way it had dealt with the Equal Rights Amendment.

The full-time candidacy syndrome which prompts these "acts of political cowardice" cannot be helped by legislation, Helms said. The solution must come from aspiring candidates and incumbent office holders, he said.

He said Rufus Edmisten, the current N.C. attorney general, has done a good job in dealing with the criminal justice system, but he said the state's chief lawyer also has an image to project.

"It's good to be against crime," Helms said, "but the office is much bigger than that."

Handicapped Awareness Day is observed

Handicap Awareness Day is being held today in an attempt to make able-bodied students aware of barriers between themselves and handicapped students, and to show ways to overcome those barriers.

The day, sponsored by the Carolina Union Human Relations Committee, will consist of three programs: handicap simulations, equipment demonstrations and films and discussions, said Robin Overcash, 1983-84 Human Relations Committee chairperson.

The simulations will be held from noon to 2 p.m. in the Pit. Blindness will be simulated with a trust walk, partial blindness by wearing goggles smeared with vaseline and arthritis by wrapping participants' hands with gauze bandages. The problems of those confined to wheelchairs will also be simulated, Overcash said.

By participating in these simulations, students can learn that "even everyday small things are made more difficult when you have a handicap." Overcash said.

Demonstrations of a telecommunications device, a talking calculator, a Braille writer, a paperless Braille device and a tape punch will be given from noon to 1 p.m. in the Union videotape lounge.

The films, A Different Approach and What Do You Do When You Meet A Blind Person, will be shown at 1 p.m. in room 202 of the Union. A discussion will follow, Overcash said.

They (the movies) are to let you see what it looks like when people react to someone who's handicapped, she said.

"Basically, we want to raise awareness that there are handicapped people on campus and that they are people too," Overcash said.

WASHINGTON — If President Reagan won't cut defense spending for the next fiscal year, leaders of the Senate Budget Committee said Wednesday they will cut it for him.

Committee chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., and Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said they told the president he had no choice but to trim his record spending plan. Otherwise he must risk having it chopped up in committee.

Domenici said he still believed Reagan and the committee's 12 Republican members can compromise on defense and other areas of the budget. He said a vote on defense spending could come as early as today.

Speaking privately, committee members and aides said no more than four of the panel's 22 members support Reagan's $1.8 trillion, five-year defense buildup as he submitted it. The president called for 1984 defense spending of $245 billion, about 10 percent above this year's figure after inflation.

PITTSBURGH — President Reagan, taking his pitch for high technology job retraining amongst a sea of unemployed steelworkers, ran into one of the largest protest demonstrations of his presidency Wednesday.

After a tour of the Control Data Institute, where 125 jobless steelworkers are being trained to repair computers, Reagan spoke to the National Conference on the Displaced Worker while thousands stood outside in a cold rain waving signs and chanting.

"Reagan, Reagan, he's no good. Send him back to Hollywood," they said. Among the banners: "Reagan's Friends Get Tax Breaks. Steelworkers Get Pink Slips." And: "Buck Stopped Here When Ronald Reagan Took Office."

The president, taken into the hotel through an underground garage, could see only a smattering of the crowd, which police estimated at 3,500.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The leftist Nicaraguan government's troops on Wednesday battled rebels in northeastern Zelaya province trying to create a "liberated" zone there, government military sources reported.

The sources, who asked not to be identified for security reasons, said fighting also intensified below the other end of the Honduran border, in the northwestern provinces of Nueva Segovia, Jinotega and Matagalpa.

The Sandinista army killed 23 guerrillas who were trying to reach a gold mine in Zelaya, the Defense Ministry said.

A rebel broadcast said anti-Sandinista Indians killed 30 government soldiers and wounded 10. It also said four air force planes bombed Indian communities all day Tuesday, killing "dozens of women, old people and children."

WASHINGTON — The Social Security Administration is taking a "hard line" against the mentally ill in its sweeping review of disability rolls, according to congressional investigators.

The General Accounting Office said some mental patients have lost disability benefits because they were capable of "rudimentary daily activities, such as watching television, visiting relatives, fixing basic meals and basic shopping activities."

The GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, said Social Security took a "hard line" in its instructions to state disability examiners on how to decide whether a mentally ill person was disabled.

WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt says the capital's annual Fourth of July celebration is despoiled by "rock bands attracting the wrong element." So he's banned their music in favor of "patriotic and family-oriented" Wayne Newton, the king of the Las Vegas casinos.

The Beach Boys and The Grass Roots, groups that have drawn hundreds of thousands of people in the past three years, will be replaced this year by Newton and the U.S. Army Blues Band as warmups for the traditional fireworks display on the Mall.

"We are trying to have an impact for wholesomeness," Watt said. "July Fourth will be a traditional ceremony for the family and for solid, clean American lives."

GPSF picnic tickets on sale

There will be a spring picnic for graduate and professional students Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at Storybrook Farm on Jones Ferry Road. The picnic, which is sponsored by the Graduate and Professional Student Federation, will feature music by the Bluegrass Experience and free beer and soft drinks. Picnickers should bring their own food and families are welcome. Tickets for the event can be purchased from the GPSF office in Suite D of the Carolina Union or from department senators for $1.

Flight Director Randy Stone was asked Wednesday whether Musgrave and Peterson had plans to float out of the cargo bay to inspect loose nylon material near Challenger's orbital engines that was noticed by the astronauts after launch. "I suspect, knowing the crew, their enthusiasm for doing things, if we give them the opportunity, they'll go back and take a picture of it," Stone said. "I don't think it means climbing out." He said he isn't involved in the planning but suspects they will "on their long tether just kind of hop straight up and take a picture of it."

A NASA spokesman said no firm decision had been made on whether Musgrave and Peterson will be given the choice.

On the third day of Challenger's five-day flight, astronauts Paul J. Weitz and Karol Bobko, commander and pilot, were busy with experiments, and they photographed lightning over the Gulf of Mexico.

There were few complaints about Challenger's performance. "It's very easy to baby-sit this vehicle when it's operating so well," said Stone.

A jet thruster on the TDRS stuck in a closed position, and it began tumbling late Tuesday. A radio command from White Sands, which is ground control for the TDRS, stopped the spin.

The satellite failed to reach its orbit initially because an attached rocket, called an Inertial Upper Stage, quit too early. Ground commands separated the rocket from the TDRS, which was undamaged by its shortened ride and the violent tumbling that followed.
