

Soviets tabled U.S. arms proposal

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON—The United States recently proposed mutual ceilings on long-range bombers and air-launched cruise missiles, and got a "caustic and acerbic" Soviet response that the offer was unfair, Reagan administration officials said Thursday.

"To date the Soviet response in this round has been dilatory and disappointing," Larry Speakes, White House spokesman, said in confirming that a new U.S. proposal was tabled last month in Geneva, Switzerland.

It was the first time the administration formally offered in the talks to impose numerical ceilings on strategic bombers and air-launched cruise missiles. The United States has an edge in both types of ocean-spanning weapons.

An official close to the talks, who declined to have his name disclosed, said the Soviets insisted that a ban be imposed on all kinds of cruise missiles. He said the U.S. offer to limit strategic bombers on each side to 400 and devise a formula limiting air-borne cruise missiles was turned down by Soviet officials who said they viewed it as nothing more than another move by the United States to seek nuclear superiority.

The latest tabulation by the Joint Chiefs of Staff shows a U.S. lead in strategic bombers of 328 to 250. The United States is developing the B-1 bomber and advanced cruise missiles, in which it has a large technological lead.

The Defense Department, however, said the Soviets were striving to catch up on cruise missiles. Intelligence sources said Wednesday they had developed a land-launched version with a range of 1,900 miles.

Cruise missiles fly much like pilotless airplanes and are designed to change course in flight as opposed to long-range ballistic missiles whose courses cannot be changed once they are launched. Many cruise missiles are designed to fly close to the ground to avoid radar detection.

Speakes confirmed that U.S. negotiator

Edward L. Rowley had presented a new proposal, but did not divulge the details. Speakes told reporters it was "premature to speculate on the prospects for agreement at this time."

The talks are to resume in early June. Separate talks in the Swiss city on limiting intermediate-range U.S. and Soviet missiles will reopen May 17. Progress on both fronts has been slow.

The proposal marked another major U.S. tactical shift in negotiations to harness nuclear weapons. Last month, President Reagan called for an interim agreement cutting back U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range nuclear missiles. Initially he sought a total ban.

In the strategic weapons field, Reagan last May focused on forcing a reduction in land-based strategic missiles, the heart of the Soviet nuclear arsenal. He called for limiting the Geneva negotiations in their first phase to ballistic missiles, thereby deferring bombers and cruise missiles for subsequent rounds of talks.

From staff and wire reports

LOS ANGELES—The Justice Department has warned the Education Department it may be in contempt of court if it continues asking male student loan applicants to prove they have registered for the draft, the Los Angeles Times reported Thursday.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified sources, said the Education Department plans to write to about 6,000 student aid officers telling them that schools may no longer require students applying for federal aid to certify that they have registered for the military draft.

On March 10, U.S. District Judge Donald D. Alsop ruled in St. Paul, Minn., that the certification requirement probably violated students' constitutional rights against self-incrimination and he imposed a preliminary injunction barring the requirement.

WASHINGTON—An over-the-counter contraceptive sponge said to give 24-hour protection for about a dollar and as safe and effective as a diaphragm has won Food and Drug Administration approval.

An official of the firm that developed the new device—to be labeled "Today"—said it will be available in 11 Western states in July and nationwide by the fall.

FDA spokeswoman Faye Peterson said Thursday that the contraceptive sponge was cleared by the agency on April 1 and has an effectiveness rate of 85 percent, roughly the same as for a diaphragm.

Diaphragms, like birth control pills and intrauterine devices, can be obtained only with a doctor's prescription.

WASHINGTON—The Senate Budget Committee, in open defiance of President Reagan, voted 17-4 Thursday to slash his Pentagon buildup in half next year.

The panel's alternative grants the Defense Department an increase in spending authority of 5 percent after inflation for fiscal 1984, in contrast to Reagan's demand for a 10 percent hike.

Reagan's version was first rejected 19-2. An 8 percent option offered by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, failed 14-7, before eight Republicans joined nine Democrats to adopt the 5 percent plan.

RALEIGH—Legislative budget committees Thursday identified ways to cut up to $75 million a year from the 1983-85 budgets for education, justice and human resources.

After lengthy debate, the Subcommittee on Education adopted a budget-cutting plan that would eliminate up to 2,500 jobs in public schools, community colleges and universities.

The Subcommittee on Justice and Public Safety adopted a budget-cutting plan that would eliminate as many as 169 jobs in the Judicial Department.

The Subcommittee on Human Resources voted to trim $2.5 million to offset anticipated increases in federal block grants, but the proposed reductions drew criticism from Department of Human Resources officials.

A UNC freshman was charged early Thursday morning for two counts of simple assault and one count of delaying and obstructing a police officer.

Albeiro Palico, 857 Hinton James, was released on a $200 unsecured bond by Chapel Hill police.

According to police reports, an officer saw Palico strike UNC freshman Steven Paul Flournoy in front of the post office on Franklin Street. The officer attempted to stop the incident. When asked for identification, Palico ran and was chased by three police officers, who apprehended him near Morehead Planetarium, according to the report.

Chinese-U.S. relations undergo strains

The Associated Press

PEKING — During the honeymoon days of Sino-U.S. diplomatic relations in early 1979, President Jimmy Carter urged visiting Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping to ease emigration from China.

"Fine, we'll let them go," Deng said. "Are you prepared to accept 10 million?"

That was soon after normalization of relations, when both sides had rosy visions of the budding relationship and no one had ever heard of a 15-year-old aspiring tennis player named Hu Na.

On Monday, in a time of troubled, shaky relations, the U.S. government granted political asylum to Hu, now a 19-year-old star. She had defected in July in California and later said she feared persecution in China because she had resisted pressure to join the Communist Party.

The decision unleashed a torrent of Chinese protest and on Thursday China cancelled all 1983 sports and cultural exchanges with the United States.

The Hu Na case is one more entry on the lengthening debit side of the Chinese-U.S. ledger. The severity of the Chinese reaction to a minor irritant is a measure of how much relations have cooled in a short period.

"Hu Na is just the latest in a series of problems, minor issues in themselves, which taken together amount to something more, especially in light of overall bad relations," said one foreign diplomat.

If China thought progress was being made in the problem of U.S. arms sales to Taiwan, diplomats said, then Hu Na would not be such a thorn. But China says the United States is not honoring a commitment to reduce arms sales to the Nationalist island.

Moreover, said the diplomats, who requested anonymity, China's complaints about U.S. textile quotas, limited imports of high technology and a railway bonds default judgment against China would not be exaggerated.

"If relations between two people are good, then small irritants remain small," said one diplomat. "But if relations are bad, they assume larger proportions."

Still, common ground in trade and foreign policy remain untouched by the Hu Na affair. "It's the sound and the fury on the surface, but the real underlying interests remain intact," said one foreign diplomatic observer.
