When her husband snores, Edna Upchurch, of Chapel Hill, said it is usually because he is extremely tired and sleeping on his back.

"I tried punching him, and that didn't work," she said. "Then, we tried separate beds, and we'd still be too close. So, we tried sleeping in separate bedrooms. That works."

Biggers said earplugs can help some, although they may be uncomfortable. "What's usually more effective is a clock-radio set on an easy-listening station that turns itself off. One thing the music does is to keep the person slightly aroused and out of that very deep sleep that causes snoring. The attempt is to keep them from being so totally relaxed." Some people listen to recordings of a waterfall or a babbling brook through earplugs, which does a much better job of lulling them to sleep than the rhythmic noise of a snorer, he said.

"Some people even turn on a fan in the hall to help drown out the noise," Biggers said. "Anything is better than that (snore) you attend to."

"All of us are capable of snoring from time to time, so we can't all adopt a holier-than-thou attitude."

Prothro reconsiders Garrow's dismissal

James W. Prothro, chairman of the political science department, said he will announce today whether he has reversed a decision not to reappoint David J. Garrow, assistant professor of political science.

Prothro said Sunday that he has been reconsidering the decision not to rehire Garrow. He is required to reconsider the decision because of regulations concerning tenure, Prothro said.

The decision not to reappoint Garrow when his term expires in 1984 was made by Prothro after a March 21 faculty vote resulted in a 10-9 vote against Garrow's reappointment. In a letter to Garrow March 23, Prothro stated Garrow's scholarship and the focus of his work were reasons for his dismissal.

Garrow, who had had books published on Martin Luther King Jr. and the FBI, protested the decision in a memo to Prothro last week, charging that his criticism of University policies and the political science department were reasons behind his dismissal.

Prothro said he would make his decision today based on the same criteria that went into the original recommendation, including Garrow's scholarly contributions and service to the overall discipline of the department.

Asked whether he has received feedback from other faculty members, Prothro said: "Discussions have been going on all along." Prothro refused comment on Garrow's memo to him.

Prothro said he has not discussed the issue with UNC Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III.

Local resident commits suicide

A Chapel Hill woman was found dead in her apartment Friday as a result of suicide.

Geraldine Wernicki, I-1 Brookside Apartments, died from self-inflicted cuts to the left wrist, both groins and three places on the left side of the neck, said Orange County Medical Examiner Steve Tracy. He estimated the time of death was between midnight and 2 o'clock Friday morning.

Wernicki was a social worker for a Burlington hospital. Tracy said Wernicki's roommate entered when she heard the victim's alarm go off at about 6:15 a.m., and after seeing blood on the walls of Wernicki's bedroom, called police authorities, who were at the scene by 7 a.m.

Tracy said that murder was very unlikely as a cause of death because the cuts were in places that could easily be reached by the victim and it would have been difficult for an attacker to inflict such wounds on a struggling victim. Tracy also said that a suicide note was found at the scene.

The cuts were made with a single-edged razor, apparently purchased at a drug store by Wernicki Thursday night, Tracy said.

After Wernicki was found by her roommate, the South Orange Rescue Squad and Chapel Hill police were at the scene by about 7 a.m.

Tracy said the suicide was not typical of ones he had seen.

"It was unusual for someone to cut themselves that way," he said. He said the cut to the right groin, severing a blood vessel in the leg, did the most damage. "She cut the right places," Tracy said.
