

NCNB to stiffen checking policy

By KYLE MARSHALL
Staff Writer

If your checking account is with NCNB National Bank, be prepared for an increase in free-checking requirements to go along with lower fees for automated teller machines beginning Oct. 1.

The state's largest bank announced the changes last week. To avoid fees for regular checking accounts, a customer must have a minimum balance of $600 or an average of $1,000. But a customer with a minimum of $500 in an NCNB savings account also can get free checking.

The increases are up from a $500 minimum or $750 average in checking and a $300 minimum in savings.

For customers who don't meet the minimum requirements, the flat fee of $2 a month will remain unchanged, while the cost of cashing a check will increase from 20 cents to 25 cents.

And the cost of using a teller machine will fall to 15 cents from 20 cents.

The changes are necessary because of deregulation in the banking industry, NCNB spokesman Kevin Barris said Monday. Deregulation has forced banks to give customers higher interest rates on savings accounts and has prompted banks to give additional services such as free checking.

"Deregulation has forced the banking industry to be conducted as a business," Barris said. "We have to price our services to reflect other prices in the market."

For example, Negotiable Order of Withdrawal accounts pay interest while allowing checks to be written. More people are opening NOW and money market accounts, putting banks in the position of "buying funds" from those customers, Barris said.

"If we're paying you 5 1/2 percent interest so you can keep your money with us, we've got to make up for it by charging for checks. The fee increases we just announced reflect that."

In addition, per-check and teller machine fees for NCNB "Bonus Checking," "Deluxe Banking" and "Personal Money Market Checking" accounts will change the same as regular checking accounts.

The decrease in teller machine fees is the result of cheaper operating costs for the machines. It's less expensive to operate them than to hire more tellers. "But the services you can get from a teller are much more than what you can get from a machine," Barris said.

Spokesmen for other large banks in North Carolina said last week they had no immediate plans to raise their fees or minimums.

Reagan challenges Soviets to limit nuclear weapons

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Declaring that "a nuclear war cannot be won and must never be fought," President Reagan offered Monday to make new proposals to limit medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe, and challenged the Soviet Union to make comparable concessions toward an agreement.

Reagan told the U.N. General Assembly that if the Soviets make concessions of their own, the United States will consider a new ceiling on the number of U.S. missiles in Europe, reductions in planned deployment of new Pershing 2 and cruise missiles, and companion curbs on numbers of aircraft.

"The door to an agreement is open," Reagan said. "It is time for the Soviet Union to walk through it."

Soviet ambassador, Oleg Troyanovsky, sat quietly as Reagan denounced the Kremlin's explanation of the shooting down of a Korean airliner as "a timely reminder of just how different the Soviets' concept of truth and international cooperation is from that of the rest of the world."

Reagan was warmly applauded by most U.N. delegations, even though he accused member nations from straying from the "original ideals" of the world body when it was founded in 1945.

The initial Soviet response to Reagan's arms control proposals, disclosed to the Soviets on Friday at the arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, was that they represented nothing new. Richard O. Ovinnikov, one of the Soviet's U.N. delegates, said they were a cover-up for "a sugar-coated deployment."

Reagan said his proposals were intended to reply to concerns raised by the Soviets, but he gave no missile or aircraft numbers. He said details would be left to the negotiators in Geneva.

The president said, however, that if the Soviet Union agreed to reduce and place global limits on its SS-20 medium-range missiles, already installed, the United States no longer would insist on matching the Soviet ceiling with deployment of U.S. missiles in Europe. The United States, though, would retain the right to deploy missiles elsewhere, he said.

Reagan said the United States will consider a Soviet demand that any agreement on medium-range weapons also include limits on aircraft as well as missiles.

He also said that if there is agreement on missile reductions, the United States would be prepared to reduce the number of Pershing 2 and ground-launched cruise missiles it plans to deploy on West European soil starting in December.

NATO is planning to deploy 108 Pershing and 464 cruise missiles in Europe to match the 351 Soviet SS-20s already deployed. Each of the American missiles has a single warhead, while the SS-20s carry three warheads.

"I believe that if governments are determined to deter and prevent war, there will not be war," Reagan said. "Nothing is more in keeping with the spirit of the U.N. Charter than arms control."

"If the Soviets sit down at the bargaining table seeking genuine arms reductions, there will be arms reductions. The time has come for the Soviet Union to show proof that it wants arms control in reality, not just in rhetoric," the president said.

British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe said afterward that Reagan's speech demonstrates "that the West means business over disarmament. It is now up to the Russians to respond in the same spirit."

Ronald Reagan

Reagan told the General Assembly delegates that "governments got in the way of the dreams" of the U.N. founders.

"Dreams became issues of East vs. West," he said. "Hopes became political rhetoric. Progress became a search for power and domination. Somewhere the truth was lost that people don't make war, governments do."

"This body was to speak with the voice of moral authority," Reagan declared. "What has happened to the dreams of the U.N.'s founders? What has happened to the spirit which created the U.N.?"

He promised the United States would uphold "the original ideals" of the United Nations and give unwavering support to U.N. peacekeeping efforts in such places as Lebanon and Cyprus.

Troyanovsky's speech, scheduled for today, was delayed until Oct. 4 for "technical reasons." He headed the Soviet delegation Monday in the absence of Soviet Foreign Andrei Gromyko, who canceled his appearance when his plane was barred from landing at commercial airports in the New York area.

State and Nation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top officials of the International Monetary Fund said Monday that their agreement setting limits on loans to needy nations allows the agency to keep its battle against the international financial crisis.

"We are now stronger... we will retain our role as catalyst in the fight," said Willy de Clercq, chairman of the agency's policy-making Interim Committee.

Financial ministers representing the Fund's 146 member states reached agreement early Monday to limit access to its lending pool.

The agreement cleared the air for the formal opening today of the IMF's 38th annual meeting in conjunction with its sister organization, the World Bank.

Together, they are the world's largest lending agencies. The IMF makes loans to nations with severe debt loads and balance-of-payments problems while the World Bank finances development projects, usually to the neediest countries.

Slicing up the Fund's lending pie had been a difficult problem. The Fund's largest contributor, the United States, had been pressing the IMF to curtail its loans to countries in dire financial straits.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Police captured two more IRA guerrillas who shot their way out of Belfast's Maze prison but the government said Monday it will be difficult to catch the 21 still at large.

Supporters of the Irish Republican Army set bonfires in Belfast to celebrate what they called "the great escape" of 38 convicts from the maximum security prison on Sunday. It was Britain's biggest jailbreak, and three of those still on the run are among the Irish Republican Army's top gunmen.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, in Canada on an official visit, called the jailbreak "a very serious incident... the gravest in our prison history."

Police have recaptured 17 guerrillas, including two who were grabbed Monday as they walked on a narrow country road 10 miles south of the prison and a few miles north of the border with the Irish Republic.

Soviets return items from downed jetliner

The Associated Press

NEVELISK, U.S.S.R. — Soviet officials gave a U.S.-Japanese delegation five crates of fuel-soaked clothes and other debris but no bodies from the downed South Korean jetliner Monday, leaving the visitors disappointed and suspicious.

"I was not surprised by the meagerness. I tended to think it would be like that," said one of the Americans, characterizing the 76 items returned in the four-hour meeting. The Soviets claimed they surrendered all they had found.

A Soviet jet fighter shot down Korean Air Lines flight 007 on Sept. 1 over Sakhalin Island, killing all 269 people aboard including 61 Americans.

Moscow claims the plane was spying for the United States and has refused to apologize for its action. But it allowed the U.S.-Japanese team to visit this port on Sakhalin on a Japanese patrol boat to get debris recovered by Soviet searchers.

Heading the Soviet delegation was Maj. Gen. A.I. Romanenko, chief of the Soviet border forces for the Sakhalin and Kurile Islands. Four Japanese and three American officials attended the talks that one described as "very formal — no one invited us to lunch."

It was the first time the Soviet Union has surrendered items from the Boeing 747. Romanenko denied his crews have recovered bodies or the cockpit flight recorders, which could reveal new details about the last moments of the doomed plane and why it veered off course into Soviet airspace.

Japanese searchers have recovered five dismembered bodies and hundreds of debris items in waters off northern Japan. At least 16 Soviet and six American vessels continued the search Monday west of Sakhalin.

"We asked Romanenko persistently and I looked at him straight in the face and asked if they really hadn't found any bodies," Minoru Tanba, chief of the Foreign Ministry Soviet section and head of the delegation, said at a news conference later.

The officials arrived early Monday aboard the Maritime Safety Agency patrol boat Tsugaru after a 15-hour voyage from the northern Japan port of Otaru.

The American group was led by Lynn Pascoe, deputy director of the office of Soviet affairs in the State Department. The others were Dennis Wilham, senior representative for Asia of the Federal Aviation Administration and Navy Capt. Bert Derry.

The party was whisked from the landing to a nearby port authority building. The area was not busy and most of the structures were dilapidated, probably built before World War II.

Fifteen militia and border guards ringed the building, apparently to warn off curious bystanders. The items included seven pairs of pants and a suit coat soaked in kerosene jet fuel, five battered oxygen bottles, six brown seat cushions, a tattered orange liferaft and pieces of metal, apparently from an engine casing.

Among four bundles of surrendered "documents" were a South Korean newspaper, a Boeing 747 technical manual, what appeared to be a business contract and an application for a masters course at Japan's Tsukuba University.

The American and Japanese officials said they repeatedly asked Romanenko how only 76 items could have been recovered in the massive Soviet search, which has included undersea trawling and deep dives by mini-submarines.

One American, when asked if the Soviets had turned over all they had found, said, "They said it was everything — but do you believe in Santa Claus?"

The Americans wished not to be quoted by name because they feared it might aggravate tensions.

Tanba said the Soviets told the delegation they "were not 100 percent sure" but believed the surrendered items were from the downed plane. He said the Soviets claimed they found the debris between Sept. 1 and 20 on the northern shore of Moneron island west of Sakhalin, and on the southwest shores of Sakhalin.

Carrboro apartment fire damages estimated at $500

From staff reports

A small fire Monday night caused an estimated $500 damage to an apartment in Old Well Apartments in Carrboro.

Assistant Chief Wayne Lacock of the Carrboro Fire Department said about 15 firefighters were called out at 6:35 p.m. to extinguish a fire that started in a trash can in a bedroom of Apartment K-1. The fire was extinguished before firefighters arrived, he said.

The occupants of the apartment were not injured.

The fire was contained to the bedroom and damage was limited to curtains and paint, Lacock said.

Carrboro Fire Department responded to the scene with two pumps and a ladder truck. Firemen evacuated all occupants of K Building for approximately 15 minutes.
