

Analyst assails Reagan defense budget

By FRANK PROCTOR
Staff Writer

The United States will face "a major economic crisis" by 1985 unless President Reagan's projected defense increases are cut, defense expert William Kaufman told a group in Hamilton Hall Monday.

Kaufman, who has advised six secretaries of Defense, has helped prepare the Defense Department's annual posture statement eight times.

The posture statement put forth analysis of U.S. national security. He now teaches political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Kaufman said the Reagan administration, which spent $209 billion on defense last year, planned to increase the Pentagon's budget to $411 billion by 1989. This is an increase of 46 percent after allowing for inflation, which Kaufman called "an astonishing rate."

Over the next six years, Reagan plans to spend about $2 trillion on defense.

This amount should be cut by nearly $200 billion, Kaufman said. If such moderate cuts are not made now, Kaufman said he feared Congress would make unwise cuts once the economic crisis occurs.

High government budget deficits would cause an economic crisis by tying up money that would otherwise be invested. The resulting high interest rates would "bring economic recovery to a screeching halt," he said.

Kaufman said he didn't think slowing defense increases could solve the budget problems all by itself. He also said he advocated raising taxes and putting a cap on entitlements like social security.

Kaufman cited several reasons the United States could reduce President Reagan's defense increases without endangering its security. He said the Central Intelligence Agency has recently released data showing that Soviet defense increases have averaged only about 2 percent annually since 1976, rather than the 4 percent originally estimated.

He said the Scowcroft Commission, which studied U.S. defense policy, finally put to rest the "window of vulnerability" theory that Moscow could knock out U.S. missiles in a first strike.

Kaufman said many of the indicators used to determine the relative balance of forces between the United States and the Soviet Union are "very misleading." For example, he said that the forces of U.S. allies are left out of comparisons and that these comparisons put too much emphasis on absolute numbers of troops and equipment.

Kaufman also said there was much waste in the defense budget. For instance, the Navy has proposed three new aircraft carriers costing a total of $54 billion, which he said were needless. He said the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines all have their own "air forces." The four all buy different types of aircraft.

At the same time, Kaufman said, the United States was neglecting parts of its military that were vital but relatively inexpensive, like sea-lift transport capability and the National Guard.

Kaufman said one problem with the Defense Department was the current Secretary of Defense, Caspar Weinberger. Kaufman said Weinberger was letting the armed services get anything they want and was not "making the hard choices on duplication of (military equipment) that I think are necessary for a Secretary of Defense to make."

About 40 students and Chapel Hill residents attended the lecture, which was sponsored by the Curriculum of Peace, War and Defense.

Durham man pleads guilty to kidnapping student

From staff reports

A Durham man pleaded guilty Monday to the common law robbery and second-degree kidnapping of a UNC student in the Orange County Superior Court.

Maurice Owen Wiley, 19, was one of three men charged with kidnapping senior Jeffrey Musler and robbing him at gunpoint in May.

Hearings for two other suspects, Kevin

Remarks Canion and Calvin Eric Wiggins, were delayed until Oct. 10.

Police reports state that Musler was kidnapped in the Granville Towers parking lot and forced to drive three men to Durham, where he was robbed.

In a separate incident, a 400-pound rolling bathtub was returned to the Phi Mu Sorority House after being reported stolen from outside the Union. As part of Sigma Chi Derby week, Phi Mu had been using the tub to raise funds for the North Carolina chapter of the Leukemia Society, said Tracy Westergaard, coordinator of the Phi Mu fund-raising effort.

Members of Delta Upsilon Fraternity returned the tub Tuesday afternoon, saying they had found it in their yard, said Sigma Chi member Chip Venable, who is coaching Phi Mu for Derby Week.

King's son opposes Helms' effort in Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., stalling a bill that would create a national holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., the slain civil rights leader's son joined a rally Tuesday on the steps of the Capitol where Helms was denounced as a "spokesman for racial hate."

"If you're a Christian, you can't be a communist," said Martin Luther King III, denying Helms' charge on the Senate floor Monday that the elder King, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968, had espoused "action-oriented Marxism."

One supporter of the King legislation after another rose on the steps of the West Front of the Capitol to castigate the North Carolina conservative. A black House member, Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., predicted that Helms' speech would cost him votes in his bid for re-election next year, and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., declared: "We will not be stopped."

Markey branded Helms as being among the "spokesmen for racial hate," and added, "We have listened to their venom for three centuries ... and we have had enough."

Those attending the planned 24-hour vigil said their goal was to pressure senators to halt Helms' delaying tactics, which began Monday and may prevent the Senate from voting on the King holiday bill until after next week's Columbus Day recess.

The Senate leadership, including Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has filed a cloture petition in an effort to curb a Helms filibuster. A vote on that motion, the first step toward action on the bill itself, could come as early as today.

President Reagan has said he would sign the bill, which the House passed 338-90 two months ago, despite some earlier reservations about the cost of a new national holiday in lost work time. The bill would observe the holiday on the third Monday in January, starting in 1986, King's birthday is Jan. 15.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he doubted that Reagan had read newspaper accounts about Helms' comments linking King with Marxism.

Asked if Reagan would agree with Helms' characterizations, Speakes said, "I have never heard the president make an expression on Martin Luther King in that fashion." He said the president's previous statements "indicate some admiration and respect for the career and life of Martin Luther King."

Inside the Capitol, Rep. Thomas Foglietta, D-Pa., seized the microphone on the House floor to brand Helms as "a master of the political cheap shot."

"Mr. Speaker, Jesse Helms could learn a lot from Martin Luther King," Foglietta said.

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., told his colleagues that the Marxism charge was "a shoddy and sordid argument reminiscent of the ugly hate-filled era that spawned Dr. King's great non-violence movement."

Rep. C. Robin Britt, D-N.C., said Helms "does not speak for North Carolina."

State and Nation

MOSCOW — The Kremlin kept up its propaganda barrage against U.S. nuclear policy Tuesday, warning that the deployment of new American rockets in Europe will "knock the ground from under" the Geneva talks to limit the missiles.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, rejected U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's contention at a news conference in Rome that only deployment of the Pershing 2 and Tomahawk cruise missiles would shake Soviet intransigence at the negotiations to limit medium-range missiles in Europe.

"By deploying its missiles," said Tass, "the Americans side would actually knock the ground from under the talks."

It said Weinberger was trying to mislead the public.

MANILA, Philippines — Opposition leaders said Tuesday the cancellation of President Reagan's Manila visit could signal the beginning of the withdrawal of U.S. support for President Ferdinand E. Marcos and a tougher crackdown by Marcos on his opponents.

"Now that he is not coming, I think it's open season," said former Foreign Minister Salvador P. Lopez. "President Marcos is no longer on good behavior."

Some opposition leaders said privately that the cancellation could prove a boon to the embattled Philippine leader. They explained that Reagan's presence would have provided a target for major anti-Marcos demonstrations that would have dominated foreign TV screens and made headlines in all the foreign papers.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Snipers terrorized the Beirut area's Christian and Moslem sectors Tuesday, leaving at least one person dead in the ninth day of a fraying cease-fire.

U.S. presidential envoy Robert C. McFarlane returned to the Lebanese capital in a renewed effort to stem the violence. A Lebanese military communiqué said Shiite Moslem snipers in the Chiyah slum shot at army positions in the Kaskas and Chatilla neighborhoods of west Beirut. The communiqué said troops shot back.

Snipers in Chiyah also were reported shooting up the Christian southern suburb of Ain Rummaneh, where terrorized residents were forced to flee.

In the mountains adjoining Beirut, Western reporters said a woman was killed and a man wounded in the Christian village of Deir Al-Kamar, where hundreds of Christians have taken refuge since Druse militiamen drove out Christian fighters.

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration formally abandoned the national goal of energy independence on Tuesday, saying the United States will rely "to some extent" on Arab oil imports for at least the next 20 years. But the administration, unveiling its latest National Energy Policy Plan a decade after an Arab embargo plunged the nation into a fuel crisis, said Americans should enjoy relatively stable gasoline prices for the rest of this decade.

"Real" oil prices — discounting for inflation — are not expected to hit their 1982 peak of $34 a barrel until 1990, it said.

"The U.S. energy situation today is significantly better than it was in 1981 when my administration took office," President Reagan said after meeting with Energy Secretary Donald Hodel.

RICHMOND, Va. — North Carolina may go ahead and execute Velma Margie Barfield, the only woman on the state's death row, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday.

But it is likely to be months before any execution is planned, said Richard League, state special deputy attorney general. He said Barfield's next step in the appeals process would be to seek a rehearing before the 4th Circuit. Next comes a petition for an appeal to the Supreme Court.

"You're looking at a spread of seven to 16 months" before she could be executed, he said.

The 4th Circuit Court said the jury sentencing Barfield may have considered that she also poisoned four other people to death, but that this "is not a violation of any provision of the U.S. Constitution."

When the recession and an increase in imports hit the auto industry, the ripples spread from Detroit to North Carolina's textile plants, battery-makers and other auto suppliers, industry officials say.

North Carolina ranks 28th nationally in the manufacture of transportation equipment, according to the U.S. Bureau of the Census. Production of auto supplies in the state accounts for only about 4 percent of the national total, but that small slice amounts to a big piece of the state's economy.

The 225 plants in North Carolina employ about 43,000 people, and 18 plants employ more than 500 each. While small in comparison to textiles, the state's largest industry, the auto-supply industry, shipped $832 million in products in 1980 — making it 14th largest in the state in terms of value of products shipped.

Farm-related businesses in North Carolina hurt by the summer drought can apply for low-interest loans from the Small Business Association, officials say.

Firms in 55 counties already designated by the federal government as disaster areas can apply for loans of up to $500,000 at 8 percent interest because of the drought and heat wave, which the state Agriculture Department estimates caused crop losses above $430 million.

The loans will be available to farm suppliers such as agricultural equipment firms, seed and feed dealers and even general stores in rural areas, SBA officials said.

"I'm sure there will be some dealers applying for the loans," said Edward Biggs of Wilson, president of the Carolina Farm and Power Dealers Association.

Bronze angel brings Thomas Wolfe home again

The Associated Press

ASHEVILLE — A relative of Asheville native Thomas Wolfe says the late author and other family members would approve of a new statue the city erected in honor of Wolfe's 83rd birthday.

The 7-foot bronze angel, unveiled Monday, occupies a Pack Square spot near the location of the monument shop operated by Wolfe's father, W.O. Wolfe.

The shop contained a similar statue of an angel that inspired the author's novel "Look Homeward, Angel."

Dr. Dietz Wolfe of Louisville, Ky., a grand-nephew of Wolfe who addressed the crowd at the ceremony, said Thomas Wolfe's brother Fred — who inspired the character "Luke" in "Look Homeward, Angel" — would approve of ... tribute. "He would say 'Tom, you've come home again and you're home with your angel that you loved so well,'" Wolfe said.

Engraved on a plaque affixed to the statue is a quote from Wolfe's "You Can't Go Home Again," published two years after his death in 1938:

"Whereon the pillars of this earth are founded, toward which the conscience of the world is tending — a wind is rising, and the rivers flow."

The angle is an "appropriate image" for both Wolfe and his writing, added Dr. Richard S. Kennedy of Merion, Pa., president of the international Thomas Wolfe Society.

Kennedy, author of several books, essays and studies of Wolfe and his work, praised Wolfe's vision of America and its cities. It was this vision, as well as his words, that earned Wolfe respect and admiration as "one of the great American writers," Kennedy said.

Wolfe, who was a UNC graduate, was also editor of The Daily Tar Heel from 1919-20.

The Asheville chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was primarily responsible for the new statue.

The unveiling was followed by a luncheon in honor of Daniel W. Millsbaugh, who sculpted the bronze. A Florida native, Millsbaugh has lived in Asheville since 1981 and teaches sculpture and metal casting at the University of North Carolina at Asheville.
