Field hockey, volleyball teams win

Machin responds well to different role

By SCOTT SMITH
Staff Writer

For North Carolina women's soccer standout Amy Machin, goal scoring is almost routine. Machin, a junior midfielder-forward from Dallas, Texas, led the nation in scoring last year. In a game against N.C. Wesleyan Sunday, Machin showed how routine scoring can be. She scored three goals in the first half to lead the second-ranked UNC women to a 9-0 win and their 14th consecutive game without a loss.

To Machin, a two-year letter winner, this would have been commonplace last season. But after seeing her role change from last year's leading scorer to this year's playmaker at midfield, Sunday's game was a nice change of pace.

On a team that is full of talent and can score goals consistently, Machin has come to enjoy assisting on goals, playing defense and helping in other facets of the game since coach Anson Dorrance moved her to the playmaking role, which she has now occupied since the beginning of the season.

"There is something about making that absolutely beautiful pass to somebody and seeing the look on their face when they score a goal," she said. "It's so much fun to see a teammate's eyes just light up before scoring a goal and know that they couldn't have done it without you."

The style of game that Machin plays, which includes tenacious defensive play and accurate passing to go along with her already well-refined goal scoring strengths, can be attributed to her hard work and Dorrance's constructive criticism.

In her freshman year, she was often criticized by Dorrance for shirking her defensive responsibilities. Machin is the first to admit this criticism was accurate at that time in her soccer career. "When I first came to Carolina, I was a very offensive-minded player," Machin said. "I played center midfield, but the team I played for my freshman year had an extremely strong defense, especially the girl that played stopper-back behind me. She was a defensive maniac.

"It allowed me to fall into a rut of doing a lot of offensive playmaking and I sort of had a bad habit of easing up on defense. Yeah, I was guilty as charged."

Dorrance told Machin that unless she changed this defensive weakness she would never be more than a one-dimensional player — a goal scorer. He told her that unless she improved on her defensive shortcomings and became a total player, she would never fulfill her true soccer potential.

At first Machin felt Dorrance's criticisms were unjustified and they angered her. But after thinking about it for awhile, she said she thought Dorrance just may have been right.

Dorrance's constant reminders of "play defense" during fall practices of Machin's freshman year stuck in her mind and, according to Machin, she was determined to do something about it.

During the spring of her freshman year, Machin lifted weights and ran more than she ever had in her life. The result was an Amy Machin who was stronger and more fit than ever.

This new-found fitness allowed Machin to play the kind of defense Dorrance had always expected of her.

"Not only did I play strong defense but I started crushing people—I went crazy," Machin said. "I became so conscientious about my defense that all of a sudden during the fall of my sophomore year, the other parts of my game became easier. Also, because I played defense, I got more offensive opportunities and put the ball in the net more often."

The culmination of this hard work ethic Machin has demonstrated throughout her collegiate career has made her more than just a goal scorer.

Machin is easy to spot on the field. She is the one playing every phase of the game—equally well.

From staff reports

The 10th-ranked UNC field hockey team dominated Wake Forest at home Tuesday night, defeating the Demon Deacons, 6-1. A pair of first-half goals by Louise Deacons, 6-1. A pair of first-half goals by Louise Hines helped North Carolina extend its winning streak over Wake Forest to eight games.

Hines now has 16 goals on the season one more than the 15 she scored last year as a freshman.

Jacky Hagenbach, Sandy Smith, Ann Marie Rosenbaum and Lisa Morin also tallied goals for the Tar Heels.

Coach Karen Shelton was afforded a chance to clear the bench and get all of her players into the game.

"We showed our depth tonight with our freshmen playing most of the game," junior forward Mary Sentementes said.

North Carolina is 10-1-3 and faces Duke today at 7 p.m. in the final home game of the season for UNC. The team travels to Norfolk, Va., on Saturday for a return match with defending NCAA champion, Old Dominion, the only team the Tar Heels have lost to this season.

Junior tri-captain Linda Kantz turned in an outstanding game. Kantz directed a balanced UNC attack and finished with 32 assists for the match.

"We did a good job of mixing up our plays and taking advantage of our opportunities," coach Beth Miller said. "We varied our attack so they couldn't key on just one thing."

Seniors Sandy Schmidt and Donna Meier, sophomore Kim Rose and freshman Jill Berkebile all had good games as North Carolina dominated the net area. The Tar Heels blocked nine attempted kills in the first game alone.

UNC will be playing in the University of Tennessee Invitational Friday and Saturday before facing ACC rival N.C. State next Tuesday in Raleigh.

The North Carolina volleyball team raised its record to 18-6 and remained undefeated in the ACC with a 3-1 win over Duke Tuesday night in Carmichael Auditorium.

The Tar Heels, 6-0 in the ACC, needed one of their best performances of the year to down the stubborn Blue Devils, 16-14, 15-4, 13-15 and 15-8.
