

Congressional Club may not back Martin

By WAYNE THOMPSON
Staff Writer

While N.C. Republican Party officials may not agree wholeheartedly on their choice for the governor's race — U.S. Rep. Jim Martin — no other candidate would stand a chance of gaining the party nomination, they say.

And the National Congressional Club of the party's most conservative wing may not endorse Martin for governor.

"It is my feeling that the Congressional Club will probably not formally endorse Jim Martin for governor until after the primary," said David Balmer, chairman of the five-campus College Students for Jim Martin Committee. "Nevertheless, Congressman Martin will enjoy a strong alliance with Senator (Jesse) Helms and President Reagan," Balmer said Thursday.

Martin is 9th District U.S. congressman representing the Charlotte area.

The issue of whether the Congressional Club supports Martin wholeheartedly or lukewarmly has been a consistent undercurrent threatening the Martin campaign. In his filing ceremony in the old House chamber of the Capitol last Friday, Martin was flanked by former Gov. Jim Holshouser, a moderate, and retired Navy Capt. Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a Republican representing the right wing of the party.

In remarks to reporters Martin's filing speech, McDaniel downplayed the Club's efforts to find a candidate with more conservative views.

"We need to pull together," he said. "Jim Martin can help Senator Helms, and Senator Helms can help Jim Martin."

Both Holshouser and McDaniel are serving as co-campaign chairmen for Martin's campaign.

The Congressional Club made overtures to former UNC athletic director Bill Cobey, a candidate for the 4th District congressional seat, about the Republican gubernatorial race.

Tom Ellis (Congressional Club chairman, asked me back in August along with a lot of other people to consider running for governor," Cobey said this week. "I thought about it for several months...but the bottom line is that I have never been interested in running for governor."

Ellis refused comment Thursday about the Club's efforts to find another candidate before today's filing deadline at noon.

Helms for Senate representative Claude Allen said he was not prepared to answer questions regarding Ellis' misgivings about Martin, but he added, "Senator Helms is on the record for supporting Jim Martin."

Holshouser, the only Republican governor elected in this century, told Martin supporters at his filing ceremony that he was proud to see the party line up solidly behind Martin. "Working together, we'll put a Republican back in the governor's mansion," he said. "We're united in a common goal: to give the state of North Carolina a new generation of leadership."

Frank A. Rouse, a former state Republican Party chairman, said in a telephone interview Thursday night that the Congressional Club would not reveal a surprise gubernatorial candidate to challenge Martin by the noon deadline.

"Even if they did, he wouldn't stand a chance," Rouse said. "Jim Martin has at least a 50 percent chance to become our next governor."

Regan, Stockman warn of gloom and doom

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The president's men swarmed Capitol Hill on Thursday in defense of his $925.5 billion 1985 budget, urging Congress to join the administration this year in a plan to reduce the projected $180 billion deficit. The result of inaction, they said, will be gloom and doom.

"We are in the same position of many companies on the eve of Chapter 11" bankruptcy, Budget Director David A. Stockman told the Senate Budget Committee.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, testifying to the Senate Finance Committee, said, "I'm very worried about 1985," because of the threat that excessive government borrowing will dry up credit markets. "By 1986, we definitely would be in trouble."

"I don't think we can wait a year to deal seriously with the deficits," Martin Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters. Unless investors are assured the government will reduce the deficit, he added, "I think interest rates and the dollar will stay abnormally high."

Some top economic advisers to President Reagan signaled a willingness to accept cuts in the defense budget in deficit-reduction talks with Congress, but said the president insists that automatic tax cuts be allowed to go into effect on schedule.

Reagan sent his formal economic report to Congress Thursday and promised a plan that he said eventually would cut the entire deficit. But that plan will have to wait until next year, he added, because it would do no good to send it to Congress in this election year.

Meantime, Reagan wants Congress to start the process by quickly approving a $100-billion package of spending cuts and selected tax increases. Many Democrats fear Reagan will torpedo this effort by refusing to accept any change in his tax-cut program. That tax program is a prime target for congressional Democrats, who view it as overly generous to the well-to-do.

"The budgets of this administration are becoming a joke — a bad joke," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, told Regan. If the president feels so strongly that the budget can be slashed, "Why doesn't he just cut the budget before sending it to Congress?"

CARACAS, Venezuela — Secretary of State George Shultz said Thursday that Nicaragua's rulers are suppressing freedom of speech and religion, and must be worried about the survival of their leftist government.

Shultz dismissed an allegation, made Wednesday by Nicaraguan junta leader Daniel Ortega, that the Kissinger commission on Central America secretly recommended to the White House that the United States invade Nicaragua and El Salvador to protect American interests.

Shultz said the charge was a "figment of his (Ortega's) imagination" and shows that "Mr. Ortega and his colleagues must be worried."

WASHINGTON — The senate voted 91-1 Thursday for a comprehensive crime control bill that could deny bail to dangerous federal defendants and keep them imprisoned after conviction without possibility of parole.

The first major bill to pass the Senate in the 1984 election year went to the House, where a key number of the Judiciary Committee predicted it would be "dead on arrival."

Major provisions would make sentencing more uniform for the same crimes, permit dangerous defendants to be locked up pending trial, eliminate parole and severely limit use of the insanity defense.

FAYETTEVILLE — An NBC spokesman confirmed Wednesday the network has hired a scriptwriter to begin working on a television show based on former Green Beret doctor Jeffrey MacDonald and the murders of his wife and two children.

Author Joe McGinnis, who wrote a best-selling book about the murders, said Wednesday NBC had bought the television rights for his book "Fatal Vision."

McGinnis said he had been told the television show "probably will be a two-night, four-hour mini-series," and probably will not be finished until next year.

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt defended his campaign contribution reports Thursday and said he was disappointed with the approach of television advertising by Republican Sen. Jesse Helms.

Reports to the Federal Elections Commission filed Tuesday show that Hunt, who is scheduled to announce his candidacy for the U.S. Senate on Saturday, received more large contributions during the past six months than Helms.

"We are very pleased with the money we raised in the past six months," Hunt said. "We are right on target in terms of where we have to be."

For the record

Because of a reporting error, the article "Refunds to be given for cancelled concert" (DTH, Feb. 2) incorrectly stated that the Carolina Union will offer refunds until March 6 to people who bought Stray Cats concert tickets from the Union. Refunds are only available through March 1.

From the United Fund and $1,500 from N. C. Memorial Hospital. Those figures should have been reversed: The United Fund gave $1,500 and NCMH gave $1,200. The article also said dental care at the clinic was done by appointment. Actually, no appointment is needed.

Because of a reporting error, the article's "Students staff weekly health clinic" (DTH, Feb. 1) incorrectly stated that the clinic received funds of $1,200

Because of a reporting error in Thursday's DTH, CAA candidate Jennie Edmondson's name was misspelled. The DTH regrets the errors.
