Finish ACC slate

Wrestlers win 1, lose 1

By BOB YOUNG
Staff Writer

Fresh from its upset win over N.C. State Thursday night at Carmichael Auditorium, the UNC wrestling team went on the road last weekend to take on its last two conference opponents of the season.

The results were mixed as the Tar Heels defeated previously unbeaten Virginia, 20-15 but came up short at Maryland, 22-13. With that loss, UNC lost a chance to take the ACC regular-season crown. Virginia is now 4-1 in the conference, as is Maryland. UNC finished the season at 4-2.

Against Virginia, the Tar Heels started off strong, winning the first two weight classes. At 118, Chip McArdle defeated Hans Houser, 15-7, and at 126, John Aumiller won 10-7 over Buddy Blaha.

At 134, Virginia's John Parr defeated Wes Hallman by a count of 10-2, and at 142, UNC's Randy Lowery scored a 6-3 decision over John Placek.

After that match, the Tar Heels went on a slide, as they did not win any of the next four weight classes.

At 150, Virginia's Gary Fischbein was a winner over Jon Cardi, 8-7. Buddy Kerr beat Tad Wilson, 4-2, to take the match at 158. At 167, Bill Gaffney tied Virginia's Steve Vittorio, 1-1. Chris Mussamando was the victor at 177 as he overcame Craig Spivey, 7-5.

At this point in the match, the Tar Heels were behind, 15-12. They regained the lead when Bob Shriner scored a superior decision over Neil Blandford, 15-3, to take the match at 190. Tommy Gorry then held on to get the decision at heavyweight, 5-3, over Roger Mello.

Against Maryland, the Tar Heels scored only three wins. McArdle won at 118, 12-0, but UNC lost the next five matches.

At 126, Aumiller lost, 5-2; Hallman lost at 134, 7-2; at 142, Lowery was defeated, 9-7; Cardi lost at 150, 7-6; and at 158, Wilson was beaten 9-3.

Gaffney broke the spell by winning 12-0, at 167, but Spivey lost at 177, 7-2, Shriner won at 190, 7-3 but then Gorry lost at heavyweight, 13-5.

Heels' women lose to N.C. State, 74-68

Sixteenth-ranked N.C. State extended the North Carolina women's basketball team's late-season slide Saturday, handing the 15th-ranked Tar Heels a 74-68 loss in Carmichael Auditorium, and UNC coach Jennifer Alley said she didn't know why UNC was slumping.

North Carolina, after starting its conference season with seven straight wins, has dropped its last three games and is now 7-3 in the ACC and 17-5 overall. The win made the Wolfpack 18-5 overall and 7-3 in the conference.

"I don't think we're in a slump," Alley said. "We just lose our intensity for some reason, and I don't know if it's physical fatigue, or what. We played very well in segments, and then we let down."

"I don't know the answer."

The Tar Heels suffered a letdown midway through the second half. After a Stephanie Israel basket tied the score at 53-53 with just over 11 minutes to play, North Carolina went almost nine minutes without a field goal.

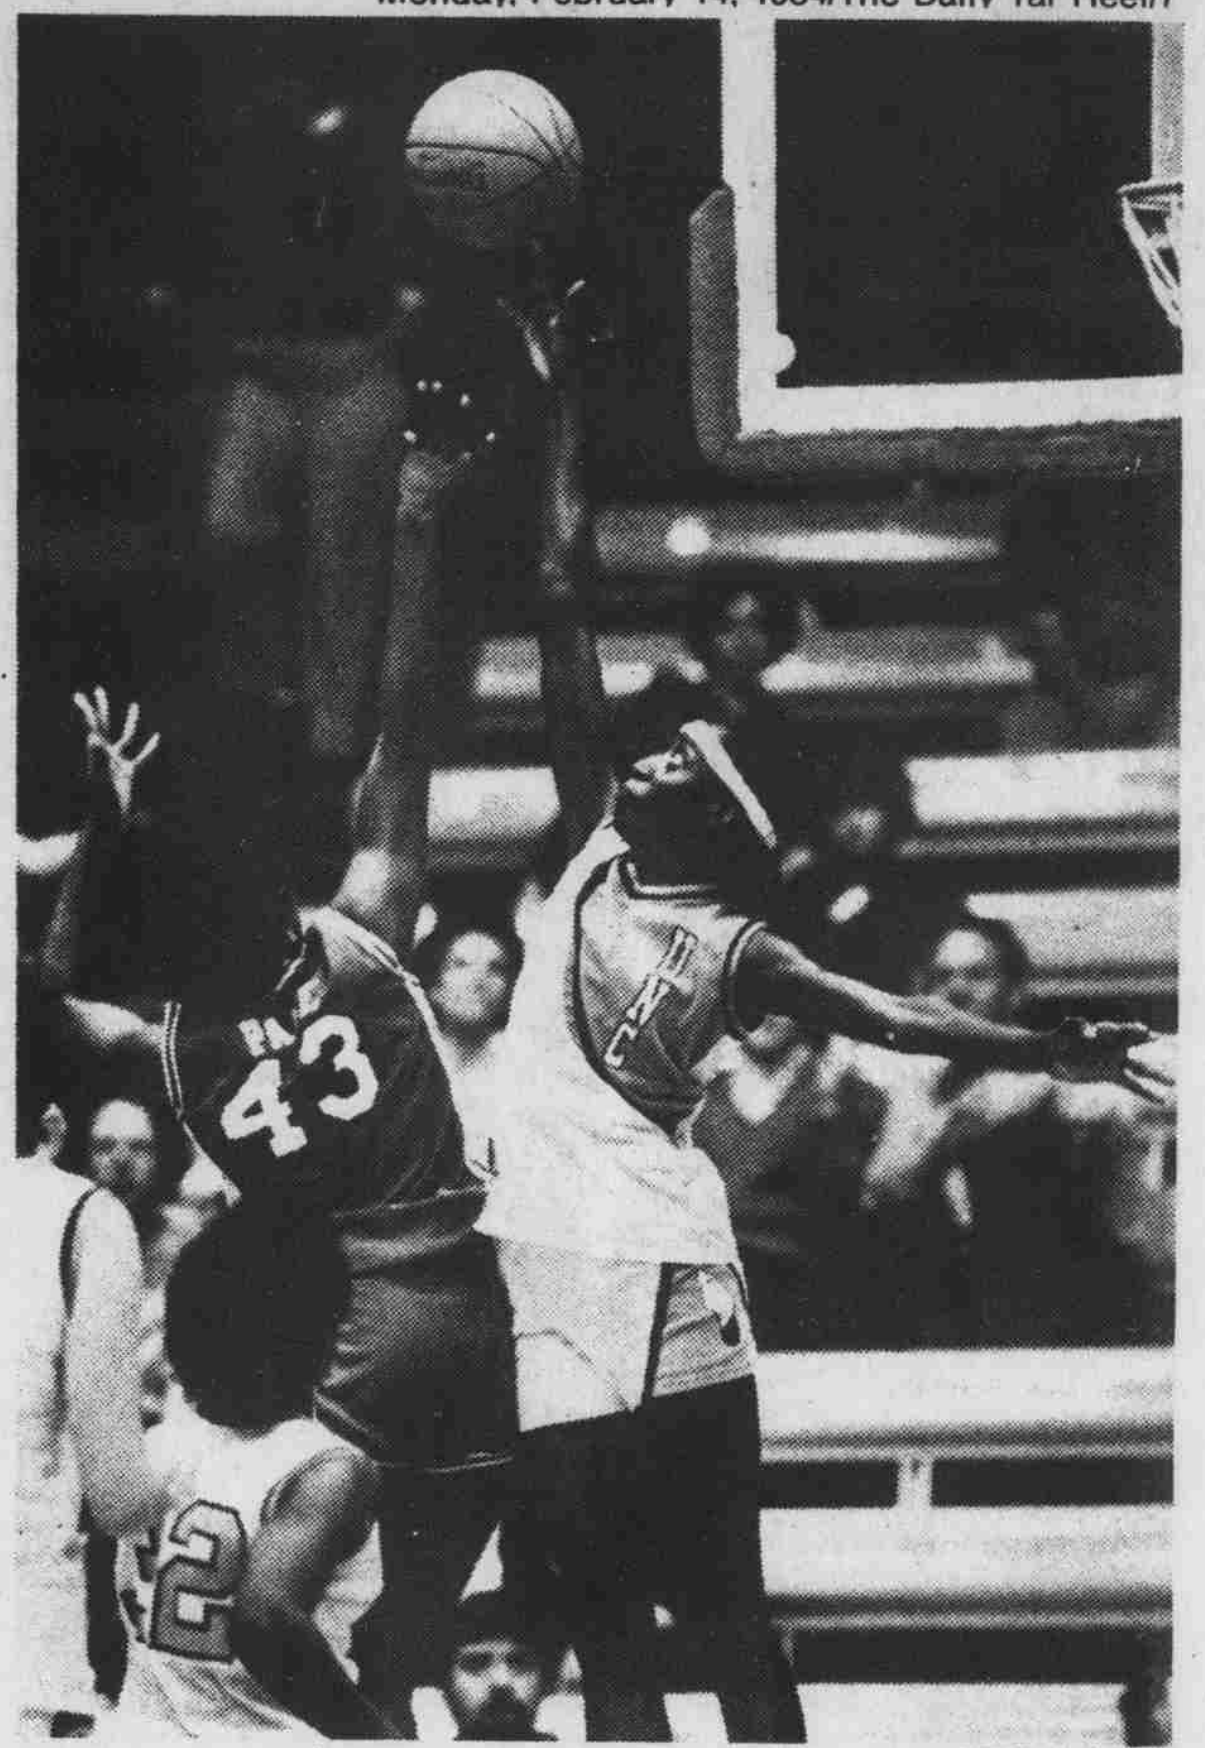

Pam Hammond's jumper with just under two minutes to play broke the drought, but by that time the Wolfpack led 71-63 and, with North Carolina having to foul to get the ball back, N.C. State hit enough free throws to seal the win.

Linda Page led the Wolfpack with 29 points on 13 of 21 shots from the field and three of four from the foul line. Priscilla Adams added 12 and Debbie Mulligan had 10 for the Wolfpack. Tresa Brown, the ACC's leading scorer, scored 22 for the Tar Heels.

"Our rebounding was a problem again, like it was (in the losses) against Maryland and Virginia," Alley said. "We were hurt by (forward Dawn) Royster going out with her fourth foul practically as we were coming out of the locker room for the second half."

"Maybe our confidence is broken," Alley said, adding that she doesn't think her team will get down on itself.

"I think they are disappointed, but I don't think the team is the type to get down on themselves," she said. "They are real fighters."

Nesbit qualifies for Olympic Trials in 3,000 meters

From staff reports

UNC senior Joan Nesbit qualified for the Olympic Trials Saturday in the Vitalis Invitational track meet in New York as she finished fifth in the 3000-meter run with a time of 9:12.18.

Nesbit, who qualified for the NCAA championships last weekend at the Princeton Relay, bettered that time by more than 11 seconds Saturday in a very competitive field.

According to coach Don Lockerbie, Nesbit's performance puts her among the top seven female distance runners in the nation. She is the only UNC track athlete to qualify for the trials so far this season.

Freshman Diane Thomas also competed in the Vitalis meet. Her time of 8.7 seconds placed her fifth in her heat in the 60-yard hurdles.

In other UNC track news this weekend, junior Jack Morgan, freshman Walter Deneen and sophomores Shunta Robinson and Becky Calhoun all registered first-place finishes to lead the North Carolina men's and women's track teams in the St. Augustine's Meet of Champions, held Saturday at the New Tin Can.

Morgan ran a smart race in the mile, finishing in a time of 4:14.14, four seconds ahead of the second-place finisher.

Deneen, who has shown great promise in early-season meets, continued to look impressive in winning the two mile in a time of 9:30.20.

Calhoun got things started off for the UNC women by edging out teammate Karol Dorsett in the mile with a time of 5:03.52. Dorsett's runner-up time was 5:08.9.

Robinson, who holds the school record in the shot put, gave the UNC women their second victory of the day as she easily outdistanced the field with a throw of 46-5.

The North Carolina baseball team defeated New Orleans 11-7 Saturday to gain a split of its two-game series.

New Orleans won Friday night, 7-5, with a grand slam in the bottom of the ninth inning. The game scheduled for Sunday was rained out.

In Saturday's game, the Tar Heels jumped out to a 7-1 lead, saw the lead cut to 7-6 and scored four runs in the last two innings for the win.

UNC went ahead 3-0 when freshman Devy Bell knocked in a run with a single, and Jeff Hubbard scored two more with another single.

Roger Williams started and got credit for his and the team's first win of the season. Williams was relieved by Ken Turner, Tim Kirk and Bob Mulligan. Mulligan picked up a save.

Scott Bankhead was the starter Friday night, but Gordon Douglas was the loser. Scott Johnson led the Tar Heels with a four-for-nine weekend, including the team's first home run of the season. B.J. Surhoff went four for eight, while Walt Weiss got three hits, including two doubles on Saturday.

The North Carolina gymnastics team returned to Chapel Hill Sunday, having lost meets on Thursday and Saturday in Alabama. But coach Derek Galvin still called the meets "by far the best Carolina gymnastics performances ever."

The team lost dual meets to No. 5 Alabama on Thursday, 181.2-173.8, and to Jacksonville (Ala.) State, the No. 1-ranked team in Division II, on Saturday, 176.1-174.65, but set several school records along the way.

The team's score against Alabama, 173.8, broke the old school record of 172.55, and against Jacksonville St. the Tar Heels scored 174.65 points to break the record they had set just two nights before.

Against Jacksonville State, just minutes after Suzanne Van Slyke had tied the school record in the beam with a 9.20, Sue Tonietto broke the record with a 9.25.

Van Slyke and Tonietto also excelled in other events against Jacksonville State. Van Slyke tied for first in the floor exercise with an 8.95 and finished second in the vault with the same score. Tonietto placed second in the uneven parallel bars with a 9.0 and second in the all-around competition with a 35.50.

The team's record in dual meets fell to 3-2, but Galvin wasn't disappointed.

"Even though we lost both meets, I feel like we won," he said. "We shattered some school records and, after the Alabama meet, the girls finally realized they are capable of competing at the top level."

UNC next competes in the ACC championship in Chapel Hill on February 25.
