

Hart closes Mondale's N. Hampshire lead

The Associated Press

CONCORD, N.H. — As Walter F. Mondale shook the last hand of a long New Hampshire campaign, a poll indicated Monday that Sen. Gary Hart was closing in on the Democratic presidential front-runner one day before the state's kickoff primary.

"I'm not looking at the polls. We're doing well," the former vice president said as he greeted workers outside a shoe factory on a cold morning.

But Hart, bidding to displace Sen. John Glenn as Mondale's closest rival, declared, "There's a lot of voter switching," in the final hours of the campaign. "People are jumping all over the place."

Hart declared he already has won in New Hampshire, because he is "considered a serious candidate."

Two fresh polls agreed Mondale holds a lead over Hart, who has surged into second place on the strength of a surprise runner-up finish in last Monday's lead-off Iowa caucuses.

An ABC-Washington Post poll reported Mondale had 32 percent of the support, to 25 for Hart, 15 for Sen. John Glenn and 8 for the Rev. Jesse Jackson. The poll has a margin of error of 5 percent.

That amounted to a seven-point Mondale lead over Hart, down from a 14-point lead that the same poll reported for the three-day period ending 24 hours earlier.

Polls aside, the candidates worried about a snowstorm forecast for primary day, and how that would affect a turnout that Secretary of State William Gardner said would run to 112,000 Democrats and independents.

Mondale himself campaigned only briefly in the state during the day. He spent less than a half-hour standing outside a Manchester shoe factory, then flew to Boston to accept the endorsement of Mayor Ray Flynn.

He left behind him a strong, labor-backed organization that is the envy of his seven rivals and has made him a prohibitive favorite in a state that will send 22 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Hart decided to stay in New Hampshire and campaign. His strategy for the last 24 hours, he said, was "try not to make a mistake."

He toured Somersworth, Portsmouth and Concord, and told reporters he believes he is pulling support away from both Mondale and Glenn.

"We are not going to fail. I think we've already won in New Hampshire," Hart said.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Christian and Moslem militias battled in downtown Beirut on Monday, with volleys of machine-gun fire and dozens of grenades temporarily closing the only crossing point between the halves of the divided city.

Artillery shells slammed into residential neighborhoods in fighting along the "green line" dividing Christian east Beirut from the mostly Moslem western sector. A 10-year-old boy and two adults were killed, and 19 others were wounded.

A 71-year-old American priest, the Rev. James Michael Finnegan, of New York City, was also killed in fighting along the "green line" Sunday.

Gov. James R. Thompson, the GOP chief of the governors' group.

WASHINGTON — President Reagan told the nation's governors Monday he might consider tax increases if big deficits remain after further federal spending cuts, but Democrats complained that Reagan "brushed off" their appeals for major action this year to stem the flow of red ink.

"I don't think this administration is listening," said Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat. "I don't think it's listening to us, and I don't think it's listening to the American people... That's one of the reasons we're in the kind of mess we're in."

"The president said he had to pursue his down-payment strategy as a first signal to the markets that we are concerned about the deficit," said a White House spokesman.

RALEIGH — A Wake County jury Monday convicted Mario Evangelista Navas Villabona of killing his sister and nephew during a 1982 siege aboard an Amtrak train and prepared to decide whether Navas should receive the death sentence or life imprisonment.

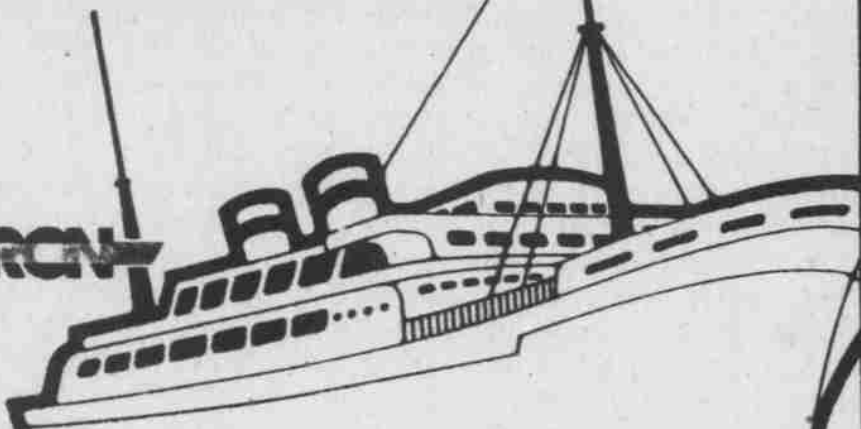

Navas was convicted of first-degree murder in the dehydration death of his 8-month-old nephew and involuntary manslaughter in the shooting death of his sister. The bodies of both victims were found in a tiny sleeping compartment aboard the train where Navas, armed and constantly threatening to commit suicide, kept authorities at bay for three days.

Navas, 31, showed no emotion as the jury returned its verdict around 1:30 p.m.
