Were the Tar Heels ecstatic? Certainly. Shocked? Not really.

"I knew we had the team and the ability," coach Jennifer Alley said. "What we were lacking was the intensity and aggression."

February was a tough month for us. But as long as we never lost faith in ourselves, never lost our confidence, I thought we could beat anybody in this tournament.

North Carolina had run off nine straight wins in January, seven of them in ACC games, and shot up to No. 15 in the polls. But February was a little less kind, and the Tar Heel lost five of their last eight games, all five losses coming at the hands of conference opponents.

"I think we lost a little bit of that 'Can we do it,' we lost a little faith in ourselves," Alley said. "But then when forward Danny Meagher took a Dawkins pass and stuffed it in for a 42-34 lead.

But Maryland's Ben Coleman and Herman Veal continued to pound Duke forward Mark Alarie, who scored just two points in the first half and nine for the game. Dawkins was chased by freshman Keith Gatlin and the Terrapin zone, and didn't score the first of his eight second-half points until his 14-foot jumpshot pulled Duke within 13 with 3:02 to play.

Maryland sophomore Len Biss led all scorers with 26 points on 12-of-17 shooting, with 16 of those we said, "Yeah, we can do it," and we put that back on the court."

Along with Brown, the ACC's player of the year, North Carolina's Pam Hammond and Pam Leake were selected to the all-tournament team. N.C. State's Linda Page and Trena Trace were the other selections.

Brown's 32 points in the championship game gave her 75 points for the tournament, which, along with 46 points each from guard Hammond and forward Leake, made for an offense that was nearly impossible to contain. The Tar Heels overwheeled transition game — "Our bread and butter," Brown said — made any offensive production by Virginia and State virtually insignificant.

"I was hopeful that wouldn't happen two days in a row, that a team would be that hot from the floor," N.C. State coach Kay Yow said. "But they were."

points coming in the second half. The Terps' Ben Coleman and Adrian Branch added 14 and 12 points, respectively. Coleman grabbed nine rebounds for Maryland.

"There haven't been too many teams outside of (the state of) North Carolina to win this thing," said Driesell, who was surprisingly nonchalant about the win. "I guess it will sink in sooner or later and it will mean a lot to me."

Maybe enough to screw the trophy on the hood of his car and drive around the state for a week.

"We never were able defensively to do the job on them we would have liked to have done. They were a powerful offensive machine out there."

Because the Clemson loss at the close of the regular season had left North Carolina unranked, another loss to the Tigers at the start of the ACC tournament would have most certainly erased any hopes of an NCAA bid for the Tar Heels. As it stands now, UNC opens the NCAA tournament as the No. 2 seed in the East and will host St. John's in the opening round in Chapel Hill at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Leake said the realization two weeks ago that the Clemson game may have been the team's last game of the season was a potent source of awakening for the Tar Heels, who take a 23-7 record into the NCAAs.

"Now we just go out and play like it's our last game," she said. "And every time you play like it's your last game, you go out in style."

Green

man Fredrick Brooks, and Rudolph Kremer, UNC professor of music.

Royall, who is working for Green's campaign in Durham County, said he was doing all he could for Green at the state level. Hackney said he was not making an endorsement for the governor's race but would attend Democratic Party receptions in the area to support all candidates.

The reception was sponsored by Julius and Ankie Van Woerd, prime investor and general manager of the Hotel Europa, who provided the ballroom and punch without charge to the Green campaign.

State and Nation

From staff and wire reports

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraq denied again on Sunday that its forces have used chemical weapons against Iranians, and said it was ready to cooperate in any investigation of the Iranian charges.

Heavy fighting continued east of the Iraqi border city of Basra, according to war communicators from each side. Both sides claimed successes that could not be independently confirmed because foreign journalists rarely are allowed at the front.

Foreign ministers of nations in the Gulf Cooperation Council reportedly were discussing a mediation plan to end the 3½-year-old Iran-Iraq war, which has threatened to disrupt oil shipping through the Persian Gulf.

But Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati, said the war had "passed the mediation stage" and would be settled on the battlefield.

LOS ANGELES — The average price of gasoline in the United States has increased slightly for the first time since July, partly because of rising consumption, but mostly due to Iran-Iraq war "jitters," a new survey suggests.

Even though the average nationwide price increase is very small, it represents "a marked turnaround" in the downward trend of recent months and from the usual tendency for gasoline prices to fall during the winter, oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg said Sunday.

Lundberg's latest survey of some 18,000 gas stations showed the average price of all grades of self-service and full-service gasoline, including taxes, rose from $1.1862 a gallon Feb. 24 to $1.1868 a gallon on March 9.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas — The Texas Board of Corrections will decide Monday whether the scheduled execution of James David "Cowboy" Autry, less than 48 hours away, should be televised.

Autry was condemned to death for the 1980 shooting death of a Port Arthur convenience store clerk, and prison officials have been ordered to inject a deadly combination of drugs into his veins before sunrise Wednesday.

Autry, 29, who escaped execution in October with 30 minutes to spare, has vigorously professed his innocence. But if the punishment is to be carried out, he said, the public should be able to see it.

The last public execution in Texas occurred on July 30, 1923, when Roy Mitchell, convicted of five murders, was hanged from a gallows next to the McLennan County jail in Waco.

The UNC Board of Governors voted Friday to seek a 10-12 percent increase in faculty pay.

The board will ask for about $67 million from the N.C. General Assembly when it holds its short session in June. Attracting and retaining top faculty members has become more difficult because of the state's failure to increase salaries, board members have said.

UNC faculty, along with other state employees, received a 5 percent pay raise from the 1983 legislature after having salaries frozen in 1982-83.
