Reagan, House leaders discuss budget cuts

WASHINGTON - House Republican leader Robert H. Michel said Monday that President Reagan understands he must accept cuts in his planned defense buildup if he is to gain GOP congressional support for any deficit-reduction package.

Reagan met with Michel and other House Republicans as the administration sought to fashion an all-GOP deficit-reduction plan independent of the bipartisan panel that reached a standoff after Reagan challenged it to find some way to reduce the record red ink in his budget.

Michel, R-III, said, "The president understands what we're going through up there on the Hill. And the president is a good negotiator, and he knows you don't give away the ball game before you get to the table, but I think the president is realistic enough to know that every dollar he requested on defense he's not going to get."

While the president and Republicans talked, Democrats who control the House Budget Committee struggled to reach a consensus on how they should proceed.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, insisted nonetheless that the House will complete action on a deficit-reduction package of tax increases and military and domestic spending restraint before Congress begins its Easter recess in mid-April.

The Budget Committee Democrats have been considering various plans, including different versions of a freeze on military and domestic spending as well as a proposal to "pay as you go" by raising taxes to finance spending above a fixed level.

They had hoped to settle on their own plan and present it to a meeting of all House Democrats on Wednesday. However, the lack of agreement forced a postponement of the Wednesday meeting.

Daugherty's case to be referred to Settlement Center

The district attorney's office has referred the case of Brad Daugherty, UNC basketball center, to the Orange County Dispute Settlement Center. The court hearing has been continued until April 5.

Daugherty has been charged with malicious destruction of personal property and disturbing the peace. Douglas Wayne Goodwin of Apex accused Daugherty and two other men of throwing candy at his car on Jan. 14. Barry T. Winston of Chapel Hill, Daugherty's attorney, said the case would probably be referred to the Dispute Settlement Center this week. He said nothing had been done yet because of Spring Break and the ACC tournament. According to Winston, the Dispute Settlement Center was formed about two years ago, and the center in Chapel Hill is one of three or four in the country. "The dispute center handles matters that get into court but could better be handled by mediation," Winston said.

Winston said the Dispute Settlement Center is an excellent way to dispose of disputes between private citizens that do not rise to the level of serious or violent crimes.

"The parties involved usually reach some sort of agreement and resolve the problems," he said.

If the Dispute Settlement Center process works and the Daugherty charges are resolved before April 5, Winston said the district attorney would probably dismiss the case.

Willhoit to request task force to study waste disposal (Orange County Commissioners Chairman Don G. Willhoit will ask commissioners today to form a citizens task force to study solid waste disposal.

The request comes in response to complaints from residents who live near the proposed 169-acre addition to the Orange County regional landfill.

Carrboro aldermen approved the $608,000 purchase Wednesday after delaying a vote on the matter at their Feb. 29 meeting. Orange County Commissioners and the Chapel Hill Town Council had previously approved the purchase. The purchase of the land, which is between Eubanks and Homestead Roads and adjacent to the existing landfill, needed approval by the three boards because it is a joint venture between the towns.

The task force will closely follow technological advancements in waste disposal, including incineration, Willhoit said. He said that incineration was the new way-to-go for waste disposal but that it was "right now, just too expensive" for local government.

In an interview Monday, Commissioner Shirley E.

Marshall said the purchase was an important step CGC March of Dimes Fred Baker, treasurer for Student Television, received an exemption from a Treasury Law that will allow STV some time before they have to commit the $22,000 they received from the CGC after winning approval for the organization toward a solution to the waste disposal problem, whether or not the land was ultimately used for landfill. Marshall said she was "very concerned about the characteristics of the land."

The regional landfill may not be usable for even half of its projected 50-year life, Marshall said. She said complete testing of the new land must be done before a decision can be made on the land's use.

year, and STV wanted to make sure they have a means to pay it back before they commit the money this semester, Baker said.

The committee also voted to allow the Model UN Club to transfer $283 to a special category in their budget to help pay for the expense of holding a Model U.N. Conference for about 135 high school students at UNC in late March.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland - President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon appealed Monday for an end to the "insane" war that has rent his country for nine years, and asked his enemies and his allies to stop the bloodshed and form a national unity government.

After the two-hour opening session of renewed Lebanese peace talks, a government spokesman announced formation of two parallel commissions - in Lausanne and in Beirut to work through the night to achieve a cease-fire.

In an emotional 10-minute speech opening the Lausanne reconciliation talks, Gemayel implored the leaders of eight warring factions to fulfill the hopes of "the bereaved, the displaced, the needy, and those uncertain about their future and their survival "

Meanwhile in Lebanon, Beirut shuddered under heavy exchanges of rocket and artillery fire Monday night. Gen. Paul X. Kelley, the U.S. Marine Corps commandant, visited American troops still in Lebanon and conferred with the Lebanese army commander.

BROWNSVILLE, Tenn. - A prison inmate who led police on a 19-day run for freedom through Tennessee and North Carolina, leaving three people dead, pleaded innocent Monday to charges of first degree murder, aggravated kidnapping and armed robbery.

James Clegg, 30, is charged with killing Paul Windrow, 59, a popular Brownsville businessman who was shot to death three days after Clegg and four other men escaped from Fort Pillow State Prison on Feb. 18.

As if waiting for a parade, onlookers lined the sidewalk near the Haywood County Courthouse and filled the building's lobby hoping to get a look at Clegg.

District Attorney General Clayburn Peeples said he didn't know if he would seek the death penalty for Florida's beaches to boogie, booze and party on spring break, Notre Dame students will be followed by a sort of chaperone on wheels.

The Notre Dame Alumni Association is sending its Mobile Office to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., this weekend as an alternative to the bar scene, supplying toll-free telephones for calls home, a message exchange, organized trips, soft drinks and hats and t-shirts.

And in the unlikely event that any Notre Dame students tire of the sun and sand, the 22-foot van will also have several company recruiters for job interviews.

Charles Lennon Jr., director of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, said he expected about 1,000 Fighting Irish students to head for Florida when the break begins Friday.

RALEIGH — Barring a court reprieve or executive clemency, James W. Hutchins will be put to death Fri day at 2 a.m. for the shotgun slayings of three law enforcement officers in 1979, state officials said Monday.

Secretary of Correction James C. Woodard set the execution time in keeping with a court order that Hutchins die between midnight Thursday and midnight Friday, said spokeswoman Patty McQuillan.

Meanwhile, death penalty foes stepped up pressure on Gov. Jim Hunt to commute Hutchins' sentence while capital punishment supporters urged him not to intervene.

Hutchins, 54, narrowly averted execution Jan. 13 when the state Supreme Court granted a stay 40 minutes before the court-imposed deadline. Three days later, a McDowell County Superior Court judge scheduled the execution for March 16, the earliest date under a state law requiring at least a 60-day delay after a stay is granted.

RALEIGH - North Carolina Democrats appear to be following a national trend as presidential hopeful Gary Hart keeps gaining ground on Walter Mondale, but Mondale supporters say they will push to reverse the trend.

"I've never seen anyone move so rapidly," said Walter DeVries of Wilmington, after interviews with 600
