the two-term governor held a whopping 56 percent to 36 percent lead. Last spring, the margin was 54 percent to 32 percent

Since last fall, Hunt's support has eroded in nearly every voter category except blacks, the poll showed. Philip Meyer, UNC Kenan Professor of Journalism, said he was not surprised at Helms' strong showing because a February poll by The Charlotte Observer showed similar results.

"Helms has outspent Hunt about four to one in the media, and his campaign has more of a thematic consistency," Meyer said of Helms' rise in the polls. About 50 University students helped Meyer and Jane Brown, assistant professor of journalism, in conducting the poll. About 1,200 adults around the state responded. Allen said the poll showed that "people are beginning to see Hunt's true record in education, spending, taxes, etc. They're starting to see that his record and his rhetoric bear no resemblance."

But Bass said Hunt was not losing support. "He's gaining," she said. "Sen. Helms has desperately been trying to get a lead and has been unable to so far. He's spent about 14 million, and for an incumbent who's been in office 11 years, that's pretty sad."

White respondents favored Helms 52 percent to 40 percent, whereas last fall Hunt led among whites 51 percent to 41 percent. Blacks, however, remained firmly in the Hunt camp - preferring him 86 percent to 8 percent for Helms In a separate Carolina Poll released Tuesday, Democrats Rufus Edmisten and Eddie Knox are tied for the lead in their party's gubernatorial nomination race. Each were favored by 20 percent of the 587

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and former state Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth each received 13 percent, followed by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram with 10 percent and former state legislator

Democrats who said they planned to vote in the May 8

Tom Gilmore with 4 percent. Edmisten, Knox and Green improved their standings since last month's Charlotte Observer poll, while support for the other candidates remained unchanged, according to the Carolina Poll.

WASHINGTON - The Senate Intelligence Committee voted Tuesday to set aside an additional $21 million for aid to anti-government rebels in leftist Nicaragua and allow the Reagan administration to spend $7 million of it immediately.

Under the compromise, proposed by Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, the remaining $14 million would go into a contingency fund controlled by the director of the Central Intelligence Agency.
