

Gubernatorial candidates respond to education issue

North Carolina citizens are willing to pay higher taxes for improvements in public education, according to the latest Carolina Poll taken by the UNC School of Journalism. But of the six major Democratic candidates for governor, only one has said he would look at higher taxes for better education.

The poll, conducted Feb. 17 through March 1, showed that 77 percent of 1,200 adults surveyed would be willing to pay more state taxes if necessary to improve elementary and high school education. And candidate Tom Gilmore has said he would also be willing to consider tax hikes, if necessary.

Harry Kaplan, a UNC law student and Gilmore's young voters coordinator, said Tuesday that Gilmore wanted to create a separate education budget apart from the state's base budget. Legislators then would vote first on education before appropriating funds for the base budget and the highway fund.

"He (Gilmore) is the only Democratic candidate to say that he will ask for a tax increase to give completely to education if the amount needed to raise teacher salaries and improve schools is not already there," Kaplan said.

Gilmore wants to raise salaries for all teachers. He opposes merit pay and extension of the school day or year. A rundown of the other candidates' positions shows that they all favor more state money to be given to education — including pay raises for faculty — without raising state taxes.

Rufus Edmisten said teacher salaries should be raised to $20,000 to be funded by the state budget surplus and improvements in the state's tax collection abilities. Lauch Faircloth insists that a tax increase is not necessary, adding that he would give more of the state's revenues to education in order to raise teacher salaries. Jimmy Green says an improving economy will result in more state revenues available for education.

John Ingram's goal is to raise teacher salaries to a level where they will be among the highest in the nation in contrast to the state's relatively low cost of living. And Eddie Knox wants N.C. teachers to make at least the national average in salaries, to be funded by an expanding tax base and by increases in fines and license fees for beer and liquor permits.

Illinois may have been the big prize in this week's Democratic presidential primary action, but supporters of Gary Hart got some good news last week about their efforts in North Carolina.

Hart has moved ahead of Walter Mondale as the choice of North Carolina Democrats, according to a statewide poll released Friday by Walter DeVries of Wrightsville Beach. Hart was preferred by 35 percent of those surveyed, compared to 27 percent for Mondale.

The Colorado senator was favored by only 1 percent of N.C. Democrats in a poll just five weeks ago, when Mondale held a commanding lead. Hart's political adviser, Pat Caddell, said North Carolina was the kind of "future-oriented" state that was fertile territory for Hart.

DeVries' poll also showed a 5 percent approval rate for the Rev. Jesse Jackson. DeVries is the head of North Carolina Opinion Research.

Convicted killer James W. Hutchins' execution last week has caused capital punishment opponents to step up their efforts to educate the public on the death penalty.

On the UNC campus, members of the newly formed Students Against the Death Penalty met Tuesday afternoon in the Campus Y building to discuss future plans. The group is scheduled to write members of the N.C. General Assembly in protest of the death penalty.

Cocaine raid largest ever

From Associated Press reports

WASHINGTON — Police in Colombia attacked an isolated jungle cocaine-processing plant guarded by communist guerrillas and seized 13.8 tons of cocaine with a street value of $1.2 billion, U.S. Ambassador Lewis Tams said Tuesday.

"It's the largest drug raid ever in the world," Tams said. "Never has anyone been found with that much cocaine. It's the largest success we've had. It's the largest drug arrest ever by any standard — money value, product, the amount seized. We got about one-quarter of the estimated annual consumption of cocaine in the United States."

Drug Enforcement Administration Spokesman Robert H. Feldkamp said, "This is absolutely the biggest seizure of its type anywhere, anytime, in the world. This will definitely put a crimp in the cocaine traffic in the United States. How much we don't know."

He said the previous record cocaine confiscation was 3,800 pounds in Miami, in March 1982.

Colombian authorities are in the process of burning the drug in the jungle where it was found, but, "There will be no country-wide high; it doesn't work like marijuana," Feldkamp said.

Lebanese Power Split Planned

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — Lebanon's rival Christian and Moslem leaders ended nine days of reconciliation talks today without agreeing on political reforms to give the various religious communities more equal shares of power.

News In Brief

However, the leaders did agree to solidify a cease-fire already in effect and to form a "national unity" government with the aim of restoring normal life to the war-torn nation.

Conference sources said the leaders agreed to the formation of a 32-man "constitutional committee" headed by Lebanese President Amin Gemayel. The committee is to prepare reforms within six months that would provide an equitable distribution of power between Christians and Moslems.

Economy Makes Big Jump

WASHINGTON — Government figures released Tuesday showed economic growth in early 1984 surged to an annual rate of 7.2 percent, setting off fears that too rapid growth could trigger renewed inflation.

While private analysts warned of a possible runaway economy, Martin Feldstein, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said the report "shows that the economy is still on a powerful roll."

Growth was measured at 5 percent higher than was estimated in December.

Senate rejects Reagan's school prayer proposal

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate yesterday rejected President Reagan's proposed constitutional amendment to permit organized, spoken prayer in the nation's public schools.

The vote was 56-44 in favor of the measure, 11 votes short of the two-thirds needed for passage of a constitutional amendment.

The vote followed two weeks of heated debate and intense lobbying by the president, who made the school prayer issue a major plank in his re-election effort.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr., R-Tenn., said as the debate drew to a close that the choice was to "either restore the neutrality of the state with respect to religion, or officially affirm an anti-religious bias in our schools."

"This amendment simply restores the neutrality which ought always to have been the case in the exercise of religion," Baker said.

But Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., leading the opposition to the amendment, said the proposal "would have us forfeit our birthright of religious liberty for a mess of speculative political pottage."

"We cannot bring our children closer to God by blaring a formula over the public address system of our schools," Weicker said.

"Is prayer to remain a personal act, a devotion, a one-on-one relationship ... or is it to be an act of the state?" Weicker asked.
