2/The Daily Tar Heel/Wednesday, April 11, 1984 Cobey sets debt payment first on '84 campaign agenda

By BILL RIEDY Assistant State and National Editor

Republican Bill Cobey of Chapel Hill, seeking the 4th District congressional seat now held by Democrat Ike Andrews, won't be running a hard-hitting campaign until the debt is repayed from his unsuccessful bid to unseat Andrews in 1982.

Most of the money Cobey has raised so far in his 1984 campaign has gone toward retirement of the 1982 debt, Tom Fetzer,

Cobey's campaign manager, said in a recent telephone interview. Cobey must repay $53,900 in short-term obligations, but Fetzer said he would not know the exact amount of the debt until July when an account of the 1982 campaign is due to the Federal Elections Commission.

Cobey, a former UNC athletic director, lost narrowly to Andrews while setting a N.C. congressional campaign spending record of $667,918. He is unopposed May 8, while Andrews faces opposition from former Chapel Hill Mayor Howard Lee and Raleigh developer John Winters Jr. The 4th District includes Orange, Wake, Chatham, Franklin and Randolph counties.

"After the Democratic primary in May, we are going to have to hit the ground running," Fetzer said.

In an effort to raise funds for retiring the debt, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has breadth of winning," the letter states. "In fact, he came so close, he's decided to once again run for Congress this year. "So, before Bill can spend a nickel to organize precinct workers, set up phone banks, or produce radio and TV commercials for his 1984 campaign, he must first pay off his outstanding campaign obligations."

Fetzer said, "We've had a good
