Student Attorney General assistants selected

By SALLIE KRAWCHECK Staff Writer

Junior David Maslia, has been named Student Government attorney general's executive assistant. The position was created this semester by the Committee of Student Conduct because of the heavy case load being handled by the attorney general's office.

Attorney General Keith Johnson said about 150 reports per year are investigated, with about 120 cases going before the Honor Court. It is the attorney general's duty to examine and look into reports to determine if they require the court's attention.

Johnson said he hoped to make some changes in the attorney general's office, by following up Honor Court cases and talking with faculty members after a decision has been rendered. The attorney general's assistant would explore but not defend the decision made by the court, Johnson said. In addition, the attorney general's office is sending a short questionnaire to faculty members to get feedback on the judicial process.

The attorney general's office will also expand services to students through other means. Students accused of violating the Honor Code may not necessarily have done so, Johnson said, but often they "have a lot of other problems, a lot of other things on their minds." They may have problems in taking tests, for example, or they may be exhibiting behavior that warrants counseling, he said.

widows, however, said the government had given the jury too narrow a definition of conspiracy.

"I'm shocked and outraged," said a weeping Dale Sampson, wife of slain demonstrator William Sampson. "The overwhelming evidence for over four years was that they should have been found guilty. This just gives the go-ahead for Klansmen and Nazis to kill people black people and anyone who's an ac-

In such cases, Johnson said, "We want to help make them aware of places that they can go on campus for help."

Johnson said the new executive assistant will help with preliminary investigations. He will "conduct interviews and look at the material, although it will still be up to the A.G. to decide if it goes to the court."

In addition, the executive assistant will be the judicial treasurer and will work in promoting the honor system on campus. Maslia served a year on the attorney general's staff and for a year as an assis-

Assistants to the attorney general are David Savage, Mary Evans, Ira Shapiro and Chip Tillman.

Other members of the staff will be named Friday, Johnson said. Johnson said applicants needed to have the ability to relate with other people while remaining objective, an analytical mind and a dedication to the ideals of the system.

The interviewers did not look for students who hoped to make a career out of law. Johnson said.

"This is an honor system, not a legal system," Johnson said.

Next year, the attorney general and his staff hope to continue in their efforts to make the Honor Code and the honor system a force on campus. However, Johnson said, "The system should never become something that hangs over someone's shoulder. We can be too visible."

10 killed in N.Y. massacre

From Associated Press reports

NEW YORK - Police said Monday that revenge over drug dealings may have led gunmen to murdef two women and eight children in their Brooklyn apartment, leaving the victims on sofas and chairs like figures in a "wax museum."

A crying 11-month-old baby found crawling among the corpses was the only survivor of the Sunday afternoon massacre, which officials called New York city's worst mass murder in memory.

All 10 victims were shot in the head from the front and some were "almost in repose," police said, indicating the shots may have caught them unawares. A pregnant woman, apparently shot as she fed a child, still had a spoon and pudding can in her

There apparently was no panic or struggle. Carmine Rossi, a baker who found the survivor, said some victims were sitting on a couch and on chairs in front of a blaring TV set.

"There were bodies all over the place," Rossi said. "They were sitting up. It looked like a wax museum, like dummies."

American bodies returned

PRETORIA, South Africa - The bodies of two American diplomats killed in a bomb blast in South-West Africa began the journey home Monday, their slayers still unidentified.

U.S. Ambassador Herman Nickel expressed the hope that the U.S.-sponsored peace effort to end a drawn-out bush war for control of the South African territory would not be set back by the killings.

There was growing evidence — but no conculsive proof - that Dennis Keogh and Ken Crabtree were not targets of the attack Sunday. The head of the territory's security police said it appeared their deaths were "coincidence."

News In Brief

The bodies of Keogh, head of the U.S. liaison office in South-West Africa and Crabtree, a military aide, arrived at a Pretoria air base on a camouflaged cargo plane.

Senator received CIA briefing

WASHINGTON — A Democratic member of the Senate Intelligence Committee said Monday he received a full briefing from the CIA about the agency-backed mining of Nicaraguan waters only because he "went and dragged it out of them."

But the CIA responded that the mining was discussed with Congress 11 times.

In an interview, Sen. Patrick J. Leathy, D-Vt., also said that while he thinks a colleague on the committee, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., was not adequately briefed about the mining, he has asked Moynihan to reconsider his decision to resign as vice chairman of the panel Leahy spoke amid continuing controversy over whether the CIA fulfilled its legal responsibility to keep the House and Senate intelligence panels "fully and currently informed" about intelligence activities that are under way or planned.
