Helms, East oppose passing anti-discrimination bill

North Carolina Republicans Jesse Helms and John East were among four senators who opposed a civil rights bill on a procedural vote, but East said the issue was not civil rights and blasted the Senate for bowing to political pressure.

"If you put the words 'civil rights' on any bill, you can get anything passed because the knees buckle and they (the senators) will go along," East said as the Senate voted 92-4 to cut off debate by opponents of the legislation. "The knees buckle and their spines curve "

The bill would overturn a U.S. Supreme Court ruling restricting the ability of the federal government to cut off funds to educational institutions that discriminate on the basis of sex. The legislation would assure that no similar court decision would apply to discrimination on the basis of race, handicap or age. But while Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.,

called the vote to end debate "an overwhelming reaffirmation" of the cause of civil rights, East argued that the bill would have effects far beyond reducing discrimination.

East and other conservatives have said the legislation could give the government greater power to intervene in the lives of private citizens. In a speech on the Senate floor, East called the measure "the most massive shift of power from the Congress to the federal bureaucracy and the courts that this Congress has ever made.'

Meanwhile, at Raleigh-Durham Airport, a black former Pentagon official campaigning for Helms' reelection bid against Gov. Jim Hunt praised Helms' record on civil rights issues, including the antidiscrimination bill.

James E. Johnson, assistant secretary of the Navy for manpower and reserve affairs in the early 1970s, said while Helms "has been called anti-civil rioghts, that's just not so."

Johnson, now director of the Washington-based American Constitution Political Action Committee, said the measure before the Senate is a "civil wrongs bill" that would allow the rights of one group to infringe upon the rights of others.

He also praised Helms' stands against abortion and homosexuality.

"I was pleased with the time I had to throw the ball," Anthony said. "The offensive line has done a great job. The receivers are running great routes and catching the ball well."

Streater, who shares playing time with junior Larry Griffin, caught four passes for 53 yards. "(Streater) has good skills, and he looks like when he walks by you like he shouldn't be playing," Crum said. "But he'll make good plays

2:27 of the half to break the game open. In the second half, the offense started drives well, but could not maintain anything. "It seems like we're playing half a game of football every week,' Anthony said. "We were making it inside the blue zone (the 30-yard line), but we made mistakes in there that we can't make. That's the time when we've got to put points on the board."

Maye has had a sore shoulder since the Navy game, and is expected to be ready for Clemson.

Meeting called 'failure'

WASHINGTON - Walter F. Mondale said yesterday that President Reagan's meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was an "apparent failure in arms control," and called on the president to provide a full accounting to the American people. In his weekly radio broadcast and in comments to reporters afterwords, Mondale also renewed his suggestion that the president "invites further assaults" by terrorists on American installations overseas with the "false, misguided and dangerous" charge that the CIA has been weakened. "I call on Mr. Reagan immediately and clearly to withdraw his claims about the weakness of the CIA," the Democratic challenger said. In discussing the Gromyko-Reagan meeting and the most recent terrorist attack on the U.S. embassy in Lebanon, Mondale continued to stress foreign policy issues that have become central to his effort to raise doubts in the voters' minds about Reagan's leadership ability.

At one point he said the Reagan-Gromyko session was an "apparent failure in arms control," and at another, he said, "apparently there was no progress toward arms control."

"I believe the president has a duty to hold his own news conference, to

Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro will campaign today in Greensboro and Raleigh, hoping to narrow President Reagan's 2-to-1 lead in North Carolina and give a boost to the state's Democratic ticket.

Rep. Ferraro is scheduled to arrive in Greensboro around noon for a downtown lunch-hour rally. She then will travel to Raleigh for a 4:30 p.m. rally on the downtown mall. a $500-per-couple fund-raiser at a private home and a $100-per-person fund-raising dinner.

Accompanying Rep. Ferraro will be Gov. Jim Hunt, candidate for U.S. Senate; Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, candidate for governor; and state Sen. Bob Jordan, D-Montgomery, the Democratic lieutenant governor nominee. None of them showed up when presidential nominee Walter Mondale visited Asheville in August.
