Massage parlor prostitution target of proposed law
By MATT CAMPBELL
Staff Writer
A new ordinance that would eliminate prostitution in massage parlors in Orange County is being proposed by Sheriff Lindy Pendergrass.
The new law would require the licensing, accompanied by fees, of any masseuse wishing to work in Orange County. The massage parlors themselves would be subject to frequent inspection to ensure that illegal activities were not occurring. According to Pendergrass, a similar ordinance in Durham may have caused massage parlors and their clients to move their activities to Orange County.
There are currently three massage parlors in the county. Two of the three Durham men charged in connection with a three-month undercover investigation of University Massage on W. Franklin Street were found not guilty in court last week. The third man failed to appear in court. University Massage owner William Douglas Johnson, 42, and manager Phillip Lee Morris, 43, were found not guilty
