Fugitive may be in area

Chapel Hill police released a bulletin yesterday about a 34-year-old "armed and dangerous" Virginia man who has been known to frequent Durham and Orange counties.

Gary Lemuel Clayton, a clean cut, 5-10 slender white male with brown hair and brown eyes, is wanted by state law enforcement agencies for questioning in connection with bank robberies, arson, breaking and entering, larceny, forgery, and extortion.

In addition to the Orange County area, Clayton is known to frequent economy motels on I-85 between Clarksville, Va. and Charlotte and, according to local police, frequently mingles in areas where there are students.

Clayton has knowledge in the areas of computers, electronics, firearms and military and survival techniques and has been known to impersonate law enforcement officers to gain the confidence of victims.

He has been convicted of larceny in Orange County, forgery and uttering in Raleigh, and false pretense in Greensboro and is believed to be driving either a 1983-1984 silver-gray Chrysler or a 1971 Buick LeSabre.

If you see a man fitting this description, please contact the nearest law enforcement agency.

Local United Way sets campaign goal

By DAN TILLMAN Staff Writer

The United Way of Chapel Hill-Carrboro is in the business of helping people to the tune of a record $380,000 this year. That's the campaign's goal for its annual October contribution drive.

"There's no question that we'll meet our goal," said campaign chairman Richard Richardson. "The drive lasts a month or until we get our money. We usually go over into the first week of November.

"A lot of people out there depend on us," Richardson said. Seventeen local agenices receive money from United Way of Chapel Hill-Carrboro.

"They help the average resident of Chapel Hill and Carrboro," he said. "It's hard to find a service program that doesn't have United Way help."

In addition to the local agencies receiving help 12 statewide organizations provide services for people in the area.

Some of the organizations that receive financial assistance from the United Way include Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts of USA, Meals on Wheels and the Inter-Faith Council for Social Services.

While most UNC students do not directly benefit from those programs, other agencies the United Way help are used by students.

Lil Smith, director of the Dispute Settlement Center, said many students use the service to solve differences outside court. "Twenty percent of our clients are students," she said. "They can walk in and get help with disputes at no charge to them.'

Smith said the center received onethird of its funding from the local United Way. This year they expect $11,000 from the United Way.

UNC students also benefit from United Way's funding of the Rape Crisis Center. Director Mary Ann Chap said the organization helps educate hundreds of women through rape prevention awareness and programming.

Preliminary campaigns during September have started pulling money into the coffers according to Margaret Balcom, United Way publicity committee chairperson. "About $73,000 is what we had on hand at the kickoff lunch Tuesday," she said.

United Way contributions come from individuals and businesses in Chapel Hill and Carrboro, corporations in Research Triangle Park and University employees, said Betty Huton, coexecutive director of United Way.

UNC faculty and staff can have the State Employee Combined Campaign withhold automatically specified amount of money from their pay. That money is donated to United Way, national health agencies or N.C. Occupational Health and Safety depending on the wishes of the employee, Balcom said.

Hutton said the United Way expects to receive about $128,000 from contributions by UNC academic affairs, health affairs and N.C. Memorial Hospital.

"We're extremely concerned about the low participation in percentage of University involvement," Richardson said. "Only about 20 percent contribute. That's not enough."

CONTINUES!

Hutton said the largest group of participants is among the lowest paid University employees.

"They see the need for services more," she said. "Sometimes people just don't think there's really a need for services in this area. But some of these (mainly physical plant employees) see the need more."

"This goal is not a lot of money for all the agencies we support," Richardson said. "We're one of the wealthiest per capita income areas in the state. One of the things United Way wants to do is let people here know that what's being done is not enough. There are lots of people who need help in this area and we're not doing that."

UNC not major factor in city growth

By MARJORIE MORRIS Staff Writes

Chapel Hill Mayor Joseph Nassif and Town Councilman Jonathan Howes asked the Task Force on Growth Management Tuesday night how their recommendations to manage growth would apply to the University.

The task force did not have the answers to the questions because they did not consider the University a major factor in the recent Chapel Hill growth.

Howes asked the task force if the council needed to tell the University to build a specific number of student dormitories because he said the University puts a heavy burden on the private market.

Nassif wondered if the council should restrict University water and sewer services when they have to restrict those services in town

Pat Davis of Orange Water and Sewer Authority told the council that the University uses 1.4 million gallons of water per day, which is 25 to 33 percent of the total water use in Chapel Hill.

Nassif also asked how many University personnel live outside of Chapel Hill. He said much of the traffic in Chapel Hill comes from people driving to work from other areas, and he said it would be interesting to see what percentage of the University faculty live more than 10 miles away.

Nassif said if a lot of cars come into Chapel Hill from out of town the council might want to consider how growth can be contained in areas near Chapel Hill.

Nassif said the council could widen the streets to ease the traffic congestion coming into Chapel Hill or allow more developments closer to Chapel Hill so people would not have to drive long distances.

He said the council would face the same problem with building restrictions if they could not allow Chapel Hill residents to build on their property.

Henderson St. Bar

robbed Tuesday

Game machines at Henderson Street Bar were pried open Tuesday night, resulting in the loss of $1,200 in cash and $800 in miscellaneous items.

Burger King Assistant Manager Ronaie Ross called police at 4 a.m. after an employe noticed the back door of Henderson Street Bar was open. The police have no leads.
