Local improvements discussed at forum

By BRIAN MULLANEY

Although most of us will have graduated and left Chapel Hill by 1990, some residents who plan to still be here are concerned about area development. Consequently, the Chapel Hill Town Council held a forum Wednesday night to hear public opinions for its 1985 to 1990 Capital Improvements Program.

Citizens expressed interest in several different and varied projects: a new library, paving roads, greenway plans, sidewalks for the safety of pedestrians, and a number of other improvements.

The forum was only an opportunity for the public to voice its opinions; the council took no action on any of the proposals or projects.

Speaking on the need for sidewalks along Piney Mountain Road, Airport Road, and the north (school) side of Estes Drive, Judy Jones, Estes Hills PTA President, said that because vehicular traffic is increasing the town should "take responsibility for the safety and welfare of all its citizens."

"We are specifically concerned that there is a need for safe pedestrian routes to the schools (Estes Hills and Phillips Jr. High), Phillips Park, the YMCA, and bus stops along Estes Drive," she said.

"We hope that the town will not wait for a serious injury before it addresses and takes action on these problems," Jones said in a memo to the council members.

Mayor Joe Nassif pointed out, however, that there is already a path from the back of the school to Elliot Road. Jones said that she was unaware of the path. "(If there is), I think that would save a lot of the problem," she said.

On another matter, Martha Lee Swenson, representing the Board of the Friends of the Library, urged the council to appropriate funds for a new library. "It is now time to consider it one of our most pressing needs," she said.

In her request, she cited the minimum standards of the American Library Association and the North Carolina Library Association as being almost twice that of Chapel Hill Library's present conditions.

"At present, we have one book per capita; we circulate eight books per capita," Swenson said. The average for the state is 3.6 books per capita.

Lisa Price, also speaking for the library, asked the council to compare the Chapel Hill Library with that of Greenville. "(The Greenville Public Library) has 2.3 books per capita," she said.

Lee House, of the Piney Mountain Road area, asked the council to give its attention to paving roads. In particular, he asked that Emily Road and Farrington Drive be priority areas.

Orange voter registration turnout high

By MIKE GUNZENHAUSER

Elections supervisor Bobbie Strickland said yesterday that turnout has been heavy at voter registration sites in Orange County.

Residents must register by Monday to vote in the November elections. Registration Monday will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Chapel Hill Public Library, Carrboro Town Hall, and the Chapel Hill Municipal Building.

Barbara Davis of the Chapel Hill Public Library said residents may also register tomorrow at the library. She said people should call the library tomorrow morning for registration hours.

Davis said registrars will also be at Festifall in downtown Chapel Hill on Sunday to register voters.

Some students have registered at the library, Davis said, but mostly older residents have come. More than half have been new voters, she said, and others have come to change their addresses.

Strickland said there have been many people to register now that the deadline is approaching. She said registration this year is about the same as in other presidential election years, but that the Helms-Hunt Senate race has added interest this year.

She said elections officials plan to use such media as radio and newspaper announcements to get people to register.

Davis said the officials also registered voters at local shopping centers and malls but would not continue this Monday.

Strickland said only 8.6 percent of Orange County's 44,000 registered voters are not affiliated with a party.

The candidates' differences on economics are clear. Martin plans to bring jobs to the state by reducing business taxes and regulations. According to Martin, repealing inventory and intangible taxes will invite new industry to North Carolina, creating more jobs and improving the economy.

Edmisten feels that decreasing business taxes will do nothing but shift the burden to the little man. He supports putting more emphasis on the industries already here.

On utility regulation, Martin approves of allowing utilities certain charges, including access charges for telephones. Edmisten wants to see regulations concerning such charges, saying they are an unnecessary burden on the consumer.

Martin also advocates eliminating taxes on food and medical supplies for the elderly in order to lessen the burden of those with fixed incomes.

Both offer fundamentally different plans to improve education. Martin calls for a 25 percent increase in teachers' salaries — 12.5 percent across the board and 12.5 percent designated for merit pay. Opposing merit pay, Edmisten supports a "career ladder" for teachers — increasing pay according to educational advances and increased responsibilities.

To pass, one alternative must receive more than 50 percent of the total vote, in which 20 percent of the student body participates. The referendum becomes void if either requirement is unfulfilled.

"It is a process by which we can attract those who would otherwise stay away from the polls," Holley said. He said he created the measure to redistribute fees for students who attend school year-round.
