

Republicans celebrate win early

By TOM CONLON

RALEIGH — Entering the home stretch of the 1984 campaigns, Wake County and Triangle-area Republicans celebrated a pre-victory party Friday night with fireworks and speeches from state and local candidates at state fairgrounds.

About 30 UNC College Republicans joined the crowd of 4,000 for speeches that North Carolina rejects Helms, the leader of right-wing politics, and wants a progressive and fiscally conservative Democrat.

He says his defeat will mean that "if you start early and work long enough, with enough money, to destroy somebody's character and reputation, you can win."

Helms says a vote for Hunt is a vote for liberal spending that will fuel inflation and high unemployment. He says if he wins the state will show its belief in the free enterprise system.

If he loses Helms says he will blame the major media in the state for distorting his record and using it against him. from Sen. Jesse Helms, gubernatorial candidate Jim Martin, 4th District congressional candidate Bill Cobey, local representatives of the Reagan-Bush campaign and other state candidates.

Helms, in a tight race with Hunt, told the crowd to ignore polls showing him in the lead. "The poll I go by is the one on Nov. 6," he said, urging everyone to vote. "But I do look at the polls quietly, and I love the one from Wilson."

According to Helms, Hunt is unpopular in his native Wilson County. Someone in the crowd shouted "We don't want Hunt back in Wilson County."

Helms responded, "What are we going to do with him then? We might send him to veracity school — he sure flunked the first time."

announcer saying "This is actual TV footage, in slow motion, of Jim Hunt voting to raise your taxes" while the camera focused on Hunt raising his hand at a National Governor's Association meeting.

The funniest ad was Hunt's rebuttal to this. The commercial showed drawings of Helms raising his hand as an announcer said, "This is an actual artist's rendition of Jesse Helms voting to cut social security." Hunt used drawings, because cameras aren't allowed on the senate floor.

If Helms wins, it will be a blow to state Democrats and a boost for the Congressional Club. If Hunt, a popular and clean-cut governor can't defeat Helms, who can?

If Hunt wins, the senate will lose one of its most outspoken conservative personalities and North Carolina will lose an influential leader.

For many North Carolinians, it's just not that easy a decision to make.

Honor Court

The Undergraduate Honor Court and the attorney general's office will hold a presentation on the UNC Honor System for freshmen, junior transfers and other interested students today at 4 p.m. in Room 226 of the Student Union.

Where do they stand on issues?

Edmisten, Martin in N.C. governor's race

Equal Rights Amendment — Martin opposes it and voted against it while Edmisten favors immediate passage. Martin says he favors legislative measures.

Abortion — Martin opposes state funding of abortions except in cases of rape, incest and life-threatening situations. Edmisten is pro-choice and favors the continuation of state-funded abortions.

Inventory and intangibles tax — Martin favors repealing both and feels the inventory tax is a detriment to business. Edmisten favors keeping the tax until an adequate plan is developed to replace the lost revenue, since the tax is an important source of revenue for local governments.

Teacher pay — Both Edmisten and Martin support an increase in teacher pay, with Martin favoring merit pay and some type of across-the-board increase and Edmisten favoring an immediate increase in pay of 7 percent a year for the next four years with provisions for some type of merit pay.

Andrews, Cobey: 4th district congressional race

Constitutional amendment to outlaw abortion — Cobey favors it while Andrews opposes it, saying that Congress doesn't have the power to decide the legality of abortion. He has voted for legislation which would allow federal employees to purchase health plans with their insurance benefits, which in some cases provide for abortions.

School prayer — Cobey favors voluntary school prayer with the local school boards having the option to decide how God is acknowledged in the public schools. Andrews says he favors prayer but doesn't think government at any level should institute a method of prayer.

The MX missile, B-1 bomber, 'Star Wars' weaponry — Andrews voted against the original funding proposal for the missile but later went on with a House bill tying funding of 15 missiles to U.S.-Soviet arms agreements. Under the bill, the Soviets have six months to come back to the bargaining table or there'll be funding for 15 more. Cobey supports full Hazardous waste — Martin has no specific position on the cleanup of waste, while Edmisten favors "absolutely stringent control" of cleanup and of the permitting process. Martin voted against giving the Environmental Protection Agency authority to prosecute violators of the Hazardous Waste Control and Enforcement Act, while Edmisten favors the adoption of a plan to prosecute violators.

Utilities — Martin favors the Construction Work in Progress rule which allows utilities to charge consumers for costs of plants under construction before they began operation. Edmisten favors immediate repeal of the CWIP rule, calling it an unfair charge to consumers, while Martin feels it is a cheaper form of financing.

General use of state money — Martin favors repeal or lowering of sales and food tax and supports a general improvement in education system of the state. Edmisten says his No. 1 priority is education. He favors an equalizer plan to establish comparable curricula and facilities throughout the state regardless of the respective tax bases in the different counties.

funding of the MX and does not favor linkage to Soviet-U.S. talks. Andrews opposed both the anti-satellite defense system and the B-1 bomber, while Cobey supports both.

Central America — Both Cobey and Andrews favor military and economic aid to the regime of Jose Napoleon Duarte in El Salvador although Andrews draws the line on funding for Nicaraguan contra groups, which he opposes. Cobey says the United States must support the operations of the contras if that's what is necessary to check a burgeoning communist-backed military in Nicaragua.

The federal budget deficit — Cobey and Andrews say they oppose tax increases, support a balanced budget amendment, and pledge to reduce government spending. Cobey wants to do that by giving the president line-item veto power, so he can delete any excessive spending items attached as riders to bills. Andrews opposes the line-item veto and also favors cuts in defense and domestic and foreign aid. While Cobey has been less than specific on where the budget knife will fall, he says it won't be Social Security or financial aid for students. Cobey also rules out a tax increase, while Andrews holds it out as a last resort to attack the deficits.

kickoff, but again UNC could not punch the ball into the end zone and led, 16-10.

The Terrapins scored the game's next 24 points, and converted on eight of their next nine third-down situations.

Gelbaugh, who completed 18 of 27 passes for 269 yards, riddled the UNC secondary in the second half with precision strikes. That, said UNC inside linebacker Micah Moon, made things difficult on the Tar Heels.

Despite the loss, Horton and Miller put their names in the record books. Horton surpassed 1,000 yards on the season, and became the 17th UNC back to do that — an NCAA record. Miller, meanwhile, is 13 of 13 on field goals this season, tying him with Brooks Barwick for most consecutive field goals in a season for the Tar Heels.

For the record

In Friday's article "UNC plans to get a phone system, dorms not included," (DTH, Nov. 2) it should have said the new Centrex system would cost the University $2 million.

The UNC Board of Trustees Committee never discussed charging students admission to the Weil Lecture featuring Jimmy Carter in order to have the lecture in Carmichael, as was reported in "Students question Weil lecture location," (DTH, Oct. 25).

The DTH regrets the errors.
