

East-West exchange planned

From Associated Press reports

HAMBURG, West Germany — The Soviet Union has demanded about $2 million for the release of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky as part of an East-West prisoner exchange, Das Bild newspaper reported Tuesday.

The Hamburg-based, mass-circulation newspaper on Sunday was the first to report that a prisoner swap was in the making. U.S. and West German government sources since have said the exchange is to take place next week on a Berlin bridge.

The newspaper added that Jewish groups in Antwerp, Belgium, and the United States were ready to raise money for the release of the prominent Jewish dissident.

Israelis intercept Libyan jet

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israeli air force warplanes intercepted a Libyan executive jet Tuesday in an apparent attempt to capture Palestinian leaders and forced it to land in northern Israel, the military command announced.

The command said it had inter-

news in brief

cepted the jet believing it had been "carrying people involved in planning attacks against Israel."

But there apparently were no guerrillas aboard the Grumman Gulf Stream II plane, which carried nine passengers and three crew members, according to sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Record rally backs Aquino

MANILA, Philippines — The biggest political rally in Philippine history Tuesday filled Manila's major public park with hundreds of thousands of chanting, praying, singing supporters of Corazon Aquino as she wound up her campaign for the presidency.

The crowd mocked and booed President Ferdinand E. Marcos, his wife, his children and even the nearby Manila hotel owned by his government, and created a roar that could be heard for blocks around. The election is Friday.

Shortage of poll tenders causes confusion

By JEAN LUTES

Staff Writer

Some campus poll sites opened late for Tuesday's general elections, and one never opened at all, causing inconveniences for voters.

The poll site at the Medical School never opened because no pollsters showed up. "I'll take the blame for that," Elections Board Chairman Bruce Lillie said. "I thought we had pollsters there but we didn't."

"The same thing happened at the Law School, but we got people over there," he said.

A sign telling voters to go to Rosenau Hall was left at the Medical School, but the polls at Rosenau didn't open until 11 a.m.

"The poll tenders just didn't get there on time," Lillie said.

Lillie attributed many of Tuesday's problems to a lack of poll tenders.

"Poll tending is always the biggest problem," he said.

"Getting volunteers can be hard. I should have recruited more people."

The Medical School and Rosenau Hall poll sites are for graduate districts, and many graduate students may not have been able to vote because the Medical School wasn't open, said Brad Torgan, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Federation.

"Whether or not it'll be important I don't know, but it bothers me that the attitude of the Elections Board is so flippant about the whole problem," Torgan said.

"It meant all the med school students had to go to the poll site at Rosenau, if they could find the time," he said.

Lillie acknowledged that there had been some problems in the election, but he said "they are hard to avoid."

There was no note on the ballot telling off-campus students they weren't eligible to vote for Residence Hall Association president. "There are probably people who voted who shouldn't have, but I don't think it will make a big difference," Lillie said.

The number of people who voted for RHA president at the Union poll site was significantly less than the number who voted in the other races, Lillie said. A number of people probably realized that they weren't supposed to vote for that race, he said.

"If I did it again, I would make sure to put the condition about RHA voting on the ballot," he said.

The pollsters did not control whether students voted for CGC representatives in their correct districts, because the entire election was on the Honor System, Lillie said. Students could have voted for districts they didn't belong to, but he said he didn't consider it a big problem.

"We've always done it that way," he said. "We wanted to make it as easy for pollsters as possible."

'Great Decisions' speaker urges treaty ratification

By HELENE COOPER

Staff Writer

The United States must ratify its treaties with the Soviet Union as well as signing them, said "Great Decisions '86" speaker Dr. Betty Lall Tuesday night in the Hanes Art Center.

In a lecture called "Star Wars and the Geneva Arms Talks: What Future for Arms Control?", Lall, who worked with the U.S. government, said the United States and the Soviet Union must find better ways of dealing with each other.

The lecture was the second in the "Great Decisions" series, sponsored locally by the UNC Office of International Affairs in the College of Arts and Sciences. It was also supported by the curriculum in peace, war and defense and the political science department.

Lall said one of the main problems between the United States and the Soviet Union today were the constant charges of both nations that the other is cheating on nuclear test ban treaties.

"(President) Reagan has accused the Soviet Union of building a big radar in Siberia," Lall said. "And the Soviets are saying that we're cheating by upgrading our radar."

The two countries need to reach another agreement on the issue of nuclear testing, she said.

Lall said the Soviets were very concerned with Reagan's insistence to go ahead with research for the multi-billion-dollar "Star Wars" program.

"The Soviets see that we're technologically ahead (with Star Wars research), but if we insist on continuing with it, the Soviets will go ahead with it too," Lall said.

The United States will eventually violate the anti-ballistic missiles treaty if the two nations do not reach an agreement soon, she said.

No one can be sure of what last year's Geneva Talks between Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev accomplished because both governments agreed to keep the contents of the talks secret, Lall said.

Their results still depend on whether Star Wars will continue to be a bargaining chip, said Lall.

"The Soviet Union will not enter into an agreement with the United States to destroy their weapons unless the United States abandons Star Wars," she said.

Warden said that although he finished last, he expected to win eventually.

"We were looking for 14,461 votes," he said. "We think we are going to get them although it may take a couple of years. That is the magic number to open up the heavens and let the Great Love Lompa return."

Greene said he would have liked to finish better than he did, but he enjoyed the campaign and learned a lot. "If I had it all to do over again, I would," he said.

He credited his finish to Granville Towers' reputation on campus, and said Brady and Hassel may have had slightly better organizations behind them.

"The top two vote-getters were from fraternities, and they had those strong forces behind them," he said. "I might not have spent as much time as I could have going door-to-door."
