

unc athlete of the week

Stacy Kaplan

This week's star comes from the whirling, twirling world of gymnastics. The UNC gymnastics team has been making great strides in almost every meet for the last couple of years, setting team and individual records so often that sometimes their accomplishments are overlooked.

Not this time. Sophomore Stacy Kaplan, who won the all-around crown in this weekend's meet against Maryland and Georgia College, becomes the first gymnast ever to win this prestigious award. Kaplan also set a school record in the floor exercise with a 9.7 mark.

Honorable mention should go to Kaplan's teammate Kristin Bilotta, who set a school record in the uneven parallel bars with a 9.7.

Injured Heels face Cavs

By TOM MORRIS
Staff Writer

The walking wounded of the UNC women's basketball team travel to Charlottesville, Va., tonight to take on the third-ranked Virginia Cavaliers in a rematch of the ACC's two top teams.

The Cavaliers, 20-0 overall and 8-0 in the ACC, handed the Tar Heels their second conference loss of the season Jan. 25 in Chapel Hill, 84-79. At tonight's game, the University of Virginia will be trying to set a new ACC women's basketball attendance record of 7000. The game will feature the talents of two of the top guards in the nation in UNC senior Pam Leake and the Cav's Donna Holt.

UNC will need one of its top performances of the year if they are to have a chance. Despite the close score of the first game, the Cav's were in control most of the game. "I think that we cannot afford unforced turnovers," said UNC head coach Jennifer Alley. "I think that was our downfall last time. We have got to contain them on the boards. We have got to have other people looking to score."

University of Virginia head coach Debby Ryan is looking for an improved performance out of her team. "We didn't play either end of the floor well (in the first game)," said Ryan. "The players were not happy with their performance either."

The 15th-ranked Tar Heels, 16-5 overall and 6-2 in the ACC, have been fighting an injury bug all season and have played most of 1986 minus three starters; center Dawn Royster, forward Kathy Wilson and guard Darlene Cannon. That's enough of a loss to devastate most teams, but despite the problems, the Tar Heels have maintained their national ranking and sole position of second place in the ACC, both of which will be on the line tonight.

Wilson and Cannon have returned to practice, but Alley doesn't know if either will be able to play tonight. However, just when you thought things couldn't get worse, they do. Guard Marlene List is hampered by a bad back. Forward Tia Poindexter injured an elbow in practice on Tuesday. Forwards Chrissy Watts and Marsha Matthews both have the flu.

"I don't have any answers," Alley said. "In my whole life of coaching, I never had a year like this. We keep thinking everyday that things are going to get better. Before that happens, we end up with three or four more accidents. At the shape we're in, we can't afford to keep practicing. It's really frustrating."

Regardless of the handicaps, the Tar Heels will have to stop Virginia's guard tandem of Daphne Hawkins (17.6 ppg) and Donna Holt (15.8). In the first game, Holt had 20 points and Hawkins 16. The Tar Heels as always will counter with Pam Leake, who led all scorers in the first game with 29 points despite fouling out with 3:47 left. Leake is averaging 23.3 points a game and has not scored below 20 points in eight straight games.
