to sign it. "There was definitely coercion," he said. UNC diving coach Barry Thomas, one of Comfort's two full-time assistants, said the swimmers should have solved the problem "in-house." Thomas said: "One of the weaknesses with their argument is they obviously wanted to avoid a confrontation with Frank. Rather than looking at themselves — the source of the problem — they're pointing to Frank."

"The ones that signed it were the ones that were more lax (in workouts). The ones that didn't sign it were more successful."

O'Brien agreed. "You only get out what you put in," she said. "People are looking at Frank when it's their own problem."

The petition also read in part: "High school coaches and swimmers observe our program and become increasingly reluctant to sign athletes with Carolina."

Some petitioners said the UNC swim program had acquired a nationwide reputation for hurting swimmers' careers, causing a recruiting slump.

Thomas agreed that UNC's recruiting has not been up to par this year. "But what's one lean year out of 10?" he asked.

All team members interviewed said that if Comfort did not resign, they would still swim for the team next year.

"I don't think anyone wants to give up," said a freshman swimmer who did not wish to be identified. "But we will keep fighting until something comes out of this."

Mikeman

which he held to his chest. "You see, Wilbur is pretty shy and you'll only be able to get him out with some cheers," he explained. Walker then danced across the floor on roller-skates, leading the crowd in "the wave."

Walker also led the crowd in a round of "All my life, I wanted to go to Carolina."

A bid for a co-mikemanship was made by Gary Kaye, a junior from Angier, and David Clary, a sophomore from Richmond, Va. Both wore blue sport shirts as they chanted, "2-7-9-8, this is how we count at State."

They did "the Carolina hokie-pokie" with cups of beer and led the chant "North Carolina," while swaying their arms over their heads.

The new mikeman will learn to work with cheerleaders and the band by attending one or two practices, said Teresa Pollard, UNC cheerleading adviser.

Board

today's vote on divestment would reflect a consensus of all the board members, he said.

Porter said his vote in today's meeting would be influenced by a combination of his feelings of responsibility to the University, his personal conscience and student input.

Phillips said he would not make his final decision on the issue until today's board meeting.
