

Five speakers to discuss liberalism at conference

By JUSTIN MCGUIRE
Staff Writer

American liberalism will be the topic of a conference commemorating the 100th birthday of Frank Porter Graham, former president of the consolidated UNC system. The "Frank Porter Graham Conference on Crisis in American Liberalism" will begin at 4 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10 and run through 5 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 11.

Five speakers with varying points of view on liberalism will speak at the conference, said Warren Nord, director of the humanities program. "The conference will be unique in that all the speakers will remain for the entire conference and will have an opportunity to respond to each other," he said.

The humanities program would like to make the conference an annual event, Nord said. The first conference, dealing with human rights, was held three years ago.

The speakers will be William Leuchtenburg, UNC history professor; Tom Wicker, associate editor of The New York Times; Frances Fox Piver, political science professor at City College in New York; Julius Chambers, director-counsel of the NAACP legal defense and education fund; and Nathan Glazer, professor of education and sociology at Harvard University.

Herbert Bodman, chairman of the conference's program committee, said he believed the wide range of views held by the speakers would make the conference interesting. "When you have one very intelligent conservative (Glazer) and four controversial and respected liberals, you're in for a very controversial conference," he said.

Bodman said the expertise of the speakers and audience participation would make the conference worthwhile.

Bodman said he believed there was not enough money available now to make the conference an annual event, but would like to see it every three years.

Participants in the conference must pre-register by calling the humanities department or going to Abernathy Hall. The conference will cost $15 for students, $30 for faculty and $60 for the general public.

Police report 17 car break-ins in Craige parking lot Friday

By MARIA HAREN
Staff Writer

Seventeen vehicles were broken into at Craige Residence Hall on Friday, resulting in $1,770 in damages and stolen goods, police said.

According to University police reports, the vandalism and thefts occurred between 10:40 a.m. and 4:23 p.m. University police officers discovered eight of the cars during their rounds at 10:53 a.m.

Among the stolen articles were four radios, three cassettes, two stereos, two car covers, one battery and some clothing. Two cars had damaged locks, and one had a damaged back windshield wiper.

Sgt. Ned Comar of University Police said the break-ins probably occurred during police shift changes.

All the owners filed complaints, he said, but there were no witnesses. Police are asking anyone with information about the break-ins to contact police.

The key to preventing such thefts is for students to keep their eyes and ears open, Comar said. "It may not be Craige next time."

Besides simply watching out for suspicious people and vehicles, he said, students can protect their cars by installing alarm systems.

The prices start from $50 and can be purchased at most electronic specialty stores. Noise alarms would deter the most possible thieves, Comar said. Alarms which only transmit signals are not recommended.

One good alarm system, he suggested, is one that hooks to the horn. The alarm would be triggered when the car was shaken.

"Most of the time the thief is too paranoid to mess around a car with its horn blowing," he said.

mistaken identities, and some houses may require under-aged residents to sign pledges saying they will not drink.

Inter-fraternity Council president Charles Shook said last year there were no set rules about in-house drinking, and that "it is commendable that the Greek system is taking precautions to follow the law and show its responsibility."

Campus anti-apartheid group reorganizes, broadens scope

By CHRIS CHAPMAN
Staff Writer

The UNC Anti-Apartheid Support Group has reorganized with a commitment to divestment, despite an April decision by the University Endowment Board not to divest its holdings from companies operating in South Africa.

"Last year, the group started its activism before it was organized," said new chairman Robert Reid-Pharr. Last spring, the group built shanties on the quad in front of the South Building to simulate blacks living under the apartheid system of government in South Africa.

This fall, the group has formed five committees: publicity, education, outreach, finance and newsletter. A coordinating committee of Reid-Pharr, the five committee chairmen and two at-large members oversees the group from meeting to meeting, Reid-Pharr said.

The scope of the group goes beyond requesting divestment of the University's $10.5 million in South African-associated companies, Reid-Pharr said. "When this university divests, we don't see a need for the group to fold. We want to see an end to apartheid and human oppression everywhere."

In line with this notion, the group committees plan to sponsor programs of their own, he said. The group has also started a newsletter, UNC/Soweto, to publicize its activities.

Scott Nelson, chairman of the newsletter committee, said the next issue of UNC/Soweto will deal with the relationships between South Africa and its neighboring states. "We want to move beyond South Africa, to focus on all of southern Africa, because they are important issues," he said. "Congress is dealing with them."

The support group has several events planned for the upcoming semester. On the weekend of Oct. 3, the group will hold a conference, Students Organizing Students, in cooperation with the Carolina Committee on Central America. On Oct. 3, the group, in conjunction with the curriculum in African and Afro-American Studies, is sponsoring the keynote speaker, Neo Mnumzana, general secretary and American representative of the African National Congress, said Matt Bewig, chairman of the education committee.

On Oct. 10, the group will hold a teach-in to mark the National Day of Student Protest for Political Prisoners, he said. The program will culminate with a sit-in in South Building at 1 p.m.

The group also plans to schedule events to mark the Nov. 22 meeting of the endowment board, and to commemorate Martin Luther King's birthday on Jan. 15, although nothing definite has been planned, Reid-Pharr said.

The group held a Stephen Biko memorial in the Pit Sept. 12. Biko was a founder of the Black Consciousness Movement in South Africa and died in a South African prison in 1977.
