

Lebo named to Pan American team, Reid left off

From staff and wire reports

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Sophomore guard Jeff Lebo of North Carolina was the only member of the ACC to be named Tuesday to the basketball team that will represent the United States in the Pan American Games this summer.

Lebo, a 6-2 native of Carlisle, Pa., will join such stars as Navy's 7-1 center David Robinson, 6-11 Kansas forward Danny Manning and two members of Indiana University's national championship team — guard Keith Smart and center Dean Garrett.

Also selected for the team were: Willie Anderson, 6-7, Georgia;

Ricky Berry, 6-8, San Jose State; Fennis Dembo, 6-5, Wyoming; Pervis Ellison, 6-9, Louisville; Rex Chapman, 6-4, Kentucky; Jerome Lane, 6-6, Pittsburgh; and Jerome Richardson, 6-1, UCLA.

Several curious omissions were UNC's J.R. Reid and Syracuse big men Rony Seikaly and Derrick Coleman.

The Pan Am Games are scheduled for Aug. 9-23 in Indianapolis and the U.S. team opens the tournament against Panama on Aug. 9 at Market Square Arena. Exhibition game between the Pan Am team and teams comprised of current NBA players are still being negotiated.

CHICAGO — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner testified for nearly four hours Tuesday at a hearing of a players' union grievance that owners conspired to restrict the movement of free agents and hold down salaries.

Donald Fehr, the union's executive director, said Steinbrenner added nothing substantial or new at the closed-door session.

The normally glib Steinbrenner refused to comment on what he told arbitrator Thomas Roberts, who will decide the case under the collective bargaining procedure.

"I can't say anything about what went on in that room," Steinbrenner said. "I just basically gave a deposition, that's all. If you want to talk about anything else relating to baseball, that's fine, but I can't talk about anything that went on in there."

Steinbrenner used the free-agent market to sign such high-salaried players as Jim "Catfish" Hunter, Rich "Goose" Gossage, Don Gullett, Reggie Jackson, Dave Winfield and Steve Kemp. But like the other owners, he stayed out of the market after the 1985 season.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth was to be the last witness to testify Wednesday.
