

State Democrats plan Funfair

By MATT BIVENS
Staff Writer

Four of the seven Democratic presidential contenders will chow down on traditional North Carolina fare and meet the masses Sept. 12 when N.C. Democrats gather at a picnic of epic proportions at Market Square in High Point.

"We're winners, and we want to celebrate the fact," said Kiki Teague, coordinator of Funfair, a day designed to draw Democrats and presidential candidates together for food and forums.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Missouri Rep. Richard

Gephardt and Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore are expected to attend the event, said Teague.

"We're expecting the largest crowd the Democratic Party has ever assembled," she said.

Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden and Rev. Jesse Jackson remain undecided about attending Funfair, and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon has declined because his daughter's wedding will conflict with the event, Teague said.

Teague said she isn't certain what Funfair, the brainchild of Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., will cost the Democratic Party.

"This is not a fund raiser, it's a fun raiser," she said. "We're trying our darndest just to break even. The profits are the fun we will have and the education we will get. I don't even want to think about it (the cost). But what we don't have in money we have in people."

Among the scheduled events are a basketball clinic, flea market, games for children, Indian dancers, and local entertainment, including country/western singer George Hamilton IV of Winston-Salem and folk singer Mike Cross of Chapel Hill.

Also on the agenda is a public question-and-answer session for the candidates, to be moderated by PBS commentator Haddon Carter, and the premiere of a film on the history of the N.C. Democratic party, Teague said.

"It (the film) re-emphasizes the fact that we need to be proud to be Democrats," Teague said.

Food for the event will be obtained mostly from the local area, she said.

Tickets for the event are $2 and can be bought at the door or picked up in advance from N.C. Democratic Party county chairmen, the county Democratic Headquarters, or the state Democratic Headquarters, Teague said.

Buses stopping in several counties will be provided by Funfair organizers for easier access to the fair.

Iraqi planes make air raids on Iranian ships, oil targets

From wire reports

MANAMA, Bahrain — Rockets fired by an Iranian speedboat started a fire on a Spanish supertanker Tuesday, and Iraq said its planes hit four ships and several Iranian industrial targets. Iran claimed it shot down three raiding aircraft.

A convoy of U.S. Navy warships and two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers arrived safely in the emirate's waters.

The ships started up the gulf Saturday, the day after raids were renewed in the waterway after a six-week lull.

Iraq reported air raids Tuesday on four ships in the gulf and five industrial and oil targets in its air war on Iran's economy.

missiles were dismantled.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl offered last Wednesday to scrap the Pershing I-A missiles after a U.S.-Soviet treaty is ratified and put into effect.

Jewish leaders angry at Pope

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy — Jewish leaders on Tuesday told Pope John Paul II of their anger over his audience with Kurt Waldheim, and the Vatican said it would issue a major document on anti-Semitism and the Holocaust.

The Jewish representatives termed their historic meeting with the pope a success, although the pontiff did not directly respond to their anger over his June 25 audience with the Austrian president, alleged to have been involved with deporting Jews during World War II.

The controversy over the pope's meeting with Waldheim had threatened to disrupt the pope's 10-day visit to the United States that begins next week, including a planned boycott in Miami on Sept. 11.

But the Jewish representatives said after Tuesday's meeting that mainstream leaders would not boycott the Miami visit.

Diseased crabs found on N.C. coast

Just when you thought it was safe to go back in the water, North Carolina's crabs are dying by the bushel.

In the wake of the dolphin disaster off the coast of Virginia, crabs with a bacteria-related disease have been discovered in the Pamlico River and Sound.

The problem, said researchers, looks very much like shell disease seen in other shellfish off the west coast. The affected crabs have holes in their shells where bacteria has eaten through, a problem often seen in polluted water.

Most of the diseased crabs were found along the south side of the river, where Texasgulf Chemicals Co.

has a large phosphate mine and fertilizer plant. While the plant has been criticized for dumping 3,000 pounds of phosphorous and some fluoride into the river daily, researchers have so far found no direct link between the plant and the disease.

North Carolina places a high value on its crab fisheries because crabs are one of the few products actually processed in the state, said Terry Sholar, district manager for the Pamlico office of the state's Division of Marine Fisheries in Washington, N.C. Most of the diseased crabs have been found in that area.

There are 25 million to 35 million pounds of crabs harvested annually for a minimum value of $8 million a year, Sholar said. In the last few years this amount has decreased, but since July there has been a rebound of the crab population. The major crab populations are found in the Pamlico and Neuse Rivers and Albemarle Sound, but the Pamlico has not contributed significantly to the rebound.

The diseased crabs make up only 5 percent of the total harvested each day, so disease is not the sole reason for the decrease, Sholar said. The crab population does not usually remain constant, but researchers are trying to determine if disease is part of the problem.

Samples of the crabs are being kept in cages in the river, but research is not yet complete on the disease. The N.C. Division of Environmental Management in Washington is researching water and sediment samples, said Roger Thorpe, water quality supervisor.

The research began in mid-July and will continue as long as possible, depending on the weather and how long researchers can hold the crabs in the river cages, Sholar said.

Texasgulf is not involved in any crab research, said J. Randolph Carpenter, Texasgulf's manager of public relations and governmental affairs. Although the company's operating permit is up for review, Carpenter said renewal should not be a problem because the state has told him no known link exists between the company and the diseased crabs.

There is also no link between the crabs' problems and human infections, Sholar said.

Samples of the diseased crabs were sent to Edward Noga, a researcher and assistant professor at N.C. State University. Noga said that while researchers had not yet identified the bacteria on the crabs, the real concern is the water quality.

"It's imperative and critical now that more water tests be initiated," he said. "It's imperative that we jump on this (while the data is new)."

action could be taken out of the committee. I would think that definitely making recommendations would be an option."

Robert Eubanks Jr., who replaced

Tanner as BOT chairman Friday, said Tuesday that although he has no definite plans for dealing with the divestment issue, "It's something that's foremost in my mind."

Drop-add

add phone system becomes a referendum, student voter turnout will be important.

If the referendum passes, the system will be in use by the spring of 1990.

DTH needs new staffers

Want to find out who writes those silly weather reports? Curious about how we pick the bottom quote on the front page every day?

A meeting for students interested in working for The Daily Tar Heel will be held Sept. 9 at 5 p.m. in Room 224 of the Student Union. We're looking for enthusiastic, hard-working writers and copy editors.

If you're interested, come on by. Maybe we'll share our secrets with you.

On-campus parking reserved for UNC home football games

From staff reports

The weekend — the only time a student can park anywhere on campus without the threat of towing — right?

Wrong. This fall, monitors will be policing several University employee parking lots beginning at 7 a.m. on home football Saturdays, the Carolina Athletic Association has announced.

Four employee lots — The Ramshad lot at Kenan Stadium, the Bell Tower lot off South Road, the lot in front of Carmichael Residence Hall and the lot in front of the Cobb tennis courts — will be reserved for the cars of football fans attending the games.

The Carolina Tar Heels take on challengers at Kenan Stadium Sept. 5, Oct. 3 and 10, and Nov. 7 and 21.

Cars found parked in the reserved lots the morning of the games will be towed to a nearby lot, without expense to the owner. Those University employees normally assigned to park in the lots will be reassigned to other lots for the duration of the game.

Maybe it's your calculator.

We know that a cheap calculator can cost you blood, sweat and time.

Investing in a Hewlett-Packard calculator, on the other hand, can save you time and again.

HP calculators not only have better functions. They function better. Without sticking keys and bad connections.

Through October 31, you can get the cream of the calculators at a non-fat price.

We're cutting $10 off the HP-12C. That buys you more built-in functions than any one else's financial calculator.

And we're giving away a free Advantage Module, a $49 value, with every HP-41 Advanced Scientific calculator you buy. This 12K-byte plug-in, menu-driven ROM was designed specially for students.

So drop by your campus bookstore and compare HP calculators with the rest. By midterms, you'll see what a deal this is.

FREE $49 HP-41 ADVANTAGE MODULE with purchase of HP-41. Purchase must be made between August 15, 1987, and October 31, 1987. See your local HP dealer for details and official redemption form. Rebate or free Module will be sent in 6-8 weeks.
