

The search begins for Mr. UNC

By LYDIAN BERNHARDT

The UNC Circle K Club is looking for a man with a good sense of humor and strong school spirit to be the 1987-88 Mr. UNC.

The annual Mr. UNC contest will be held Oct. 7 in the Great Hall of the Student Union.

A good sense of humor and a strong school spirit are the main requirements for Mr. UNC competitors, according to Will Sneden, president of the Circle K Club.

Creativity and spontaneity are also important, Sneden said. "He has to be able to think fast on his feet to make up an improv," Sneden said. What isn't important, he emphasized, is good looks or physique.

Usually, contestants have a sponsor, such as fraternities, sororities and other campus organizations. Contestants can also sponsor themselves.

"The sponsors mainly provide support, and help with the application fee," Sneden said.

Applications are available at the Union desk, and will be accepted through Oct. 1. A $5 application fee is required.

The contest will consist of four parts. First, the contestants will be introduced to the audience in a parade; then, they will lead onlookers in an original cheer.

Improvisations make up the third part of the contest, when contestants are read a humorous scenario and asked to react to it. The talent competition is last.

"It has to be a real talent," Sneden said. "In the past, we've had someone shave his head or something. This year we're trying to get away from that."

The master of ceremonies will be Sarah Halfkey, formerly of 94-Z (WZZU) radio station.

The contest, a fund raiser for the Orange County Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC), has become a tradition. This is the fourth sponsored by Circle K.

"This is something we'd like to keep going," said Vicki Daughtry, secretary of the club. The contest drew about 350 people last year, Daughtry said, and about $400 was raised for ARC last year.

ARC provides counseling, information and special assistance to mentally retarded people and their families through volunteer, parental and professional help.

Circle K is a non-profit campus service organization sponsored by the Kiwanis Club.

Parking rules differ for moped riders

By LYNNE McCLINTOCK

Students with motorcycles and motor scooters must have parking permits and park in the designated parking spaces to avoid tickets, Mary Fox, UNC parking control coordinator, said Monday.

But moped riders may park without parking permits at bicycle racks, Fox said.

The difference between motorcycles, motor scooters and mopeds is that the first two don't have pedals, said John Rall, sales manager of Kawasaki Suzuki of Chapel Hill, motorcycle sales and services.

"Basically, mopeds have pedals and do not require a helmet, license or insurance," Rall said.

"Motorcycles and motor scooters require a helmet, a North Carolina Motorcycle License and insurance."

"We sell more mopeds because mopeds do not require parking stickers on campus," Rall said. "In the last few weeks, we have had a deluge of moped sales."

Fox said the tickets are given when motorcycles or motor scooters are parked without a valid permit, or when they are parked in automobile spaces instead of the designated motorcycle spaces.

Both violations carry a $10 fine. Fox said the Traffic Office provides maps indicating the areas that motorcycles and motor scooters can be parked.

Estes Drive Post Office to get facelift

By HUNTER LAMBETH

The U.S. Postal Service has undertaken plans to renovate the Estes Drive Post Office for the first time since the building was constructed in 1969.

Customer services will continue as usual at the post office building, located at the corner of Estes Drive and East Franklin streets, said Jim Carter, superintendent of postal services at the Estes Drive Post Office.

"We will attempt to do most of the work on weekends and holidays," Carter said. "The work will include total renovation and repair of both the employee and the customer parking lots, the exterior of the building and the interior of the lobby. We will also put in newer lighting."

The postal service will replace the self-service postal equipment, install a new ceiling and floor and give the lobby area a complete facelift, Carter said.

A U.S. Postal Service architect and a firm located in Raleigh are currently designing these renovation plans. Work on the building will probably begin within the next few months, Carter said, but a firm date for construction has not yet been scheduled.

"That decision lies in the hands of the architectural engineer. There is no suspended date for the completion of the projected product," he said.

The U.S. Postal Service will pay the costs for the renovations, which will range from $400,000 to $500,000. These renovations will not alter the size of the building, but will make it a more pleasant place to visit, Carter said.

"There will be no additions to the building. Instead, the building will be upgraded," he said. "The building needs to be better-looking and more serviceable to customers. We will also add more upgraded equipment."

"For the four or five minutes customers spend in the building, we want them to feel welcome here," Carter said. "The total atmosphere of the lobby will be considered in the renovations."

Chairman

always use more space," Sanders said. "But, the University hasn't told us yet how we can gain this space."

Sanders was appointed chairman of the committee by Chancellor Christopher Fordham.

Wright said, "He really should not have been appointed to the chairman's position. Not only is it unfair to him, but it is also unfair to the ones who live there since the one who wants our property is being our judge."

At the Faculty Council meeting Friday, Fordham said he had not received any complaints about Sanders' appointment.

The land-use committee, formed after the land-use plan received widespread criticism this summer, will make recommendations to the chancellor and Chapel Hill mayor in January. Then, the revised land-use plan will be presented to UNC's Board of Trustees for approval.

Town resident Charles Shaffer, another member of the land-use committee, said he has no objection to Sanders' appointment.

"It's definitely true that the Institute of Government is seeking more space," Shaffer said. "But I don't think this had anything to do with the chancellor's decision to appoint Mr. Sanders as chairman."
