Golfers finish eighth, volleyball rolls and Lakers defeat Cavs

From staff reports

Texas captured the 12th Annual Lady Tar Heel Invitational golf tournament over the weekend at Finley Golf Course, while the UNC squad finished eighth.

The Longhorns placed four players in the top eight, including individual title winner Kate Golden, who finished the tournament with an even par 219. Golden held off Kentucky's Kate Rogerson, who had won the last two individual titles in the tournaments she played in, by one stroke.

On Saturday, Minnesota's Mary Kuhlman tied a course record when she shot a sizzling 68. Wake Forest's Kiernan Precht fired a hole-in-one on Sunday on the par-3, 172-yard second hole.

UNC's highest finisher was Donna Andrews, who finished tied for ninth with a 229 mark after an even-par 73 on Sunday.

The tournament marks the end of the fall season for the Tar Heels.

In other weekend action, the UNC volleyball team went 3-0 this weekend by beating Maryland on Friday and capturing the William and Mary High IQ Invitational title on Saturday.

The Terrapins went down 15-5, 15-4, 11-15 and 15-8. Sharon German led the team with 20 kills, while Andrea Welles had 20 kills too, to go along with her 14 digs.

The Tar Heels then made their way to Williamsburg, Va., and dumped Villanova in their first match Saturday 11-15, 15-6, 15-12 and 15-9. Freshman phenom Liz Berg had 12 kills and 11 digs in the match.

William and Mary was the next Tar Heel victim, succumbing 7-15, 15-10, 14-16, 15-10 and 15-4 in a hard-fought match. German continued her impressive play with 19 kills, while freshman setter Patti Hopkins had 11 digs to lead the Tar Heels, who upped their record to 16-10 after this weekend's action.

The NBA came to Chapel Hill Saturday night, as the Los Angeles Lakers knocked off the Cleveland Cavaliers, 123-119. The game, the first of two exhibition contests to be held in the Smith Center this season, was marked by spectacular action intermingled with the sloppiness that characterizes so much of exhibition sports.

The game featured the return of former Tar Heel basketball stars James Worthy and Brad Daugherty, who squared off in front of the partisan crowd, which reserved most of its applause for the men in purple and gold.

Worthy sparked in the first half, collecting 16 points on 6-of-8 shooting and exciting the crowd with one breakaway jam. He finished the day as the Lakers' leading scorer, pouring in 28 points and hitting 10 of 14 shots from the floor.

Daugherty was much less impressive early, and seemed obviously anxious about playing in front of the home crowd. He had but six points and turned the ball over thrice in the first half, and put up a couple of turnaround jumpers that fell badly short.

But in the second half, Daugherty settled down and played better inside, ending the day with 17 points, six rebounds and six assists.

As for the game itself, the Lakers jumped ahead early, but Los Angeles coach Pat Riley made sure his bench saw a lot of playing time, and Cleveland took advantage of that to grab a 67-60 halftime lead. In the second half, the Laker fast break began to ravage the Cav defense, and in the final minutes a superior inside game clinched the win for the world champions.
