Minority high school students visit campus to attend Honors Day recruitment program

From staff reports

More than 200 minority high school students and parents attended the first annual High School Honors Day, a minority recruitment event held Saturday in the Student Union.

The event was sponsored by the Black Student Movement, along with the Office of University Affairs and the admissions office.

The students, who rank in the top 15 percent of their high school classes, participated in sessions sponsored by the admissions office, student aid office and several campus organizations.

Fulbright scholarships awarded

Three UNC students have received Fulbright scholar grants for graduate study abroad.

Slavic Languages, will study Slavic languages in Yugoslavia.

Musicology student Liane Curtis, a graduate of the University of California at Santa Barbara, will conduct research on 15th-century music in Germany.

University of Alabama graduate Penelope Pynes will study linguistic patterns in the speech of Mannheim teenagers in Germany.

ROTC sponsors speech

Capt. James Pisananni, former commanding officer of the nuclear-powered trident submarine USS Ohio, will speak to ROTC midshipmen and other interested students today at 2 p.m. in the NROTC Building.

Pisananni, who is now stationed in Norfolk, Va., will speak on U.S. submarine operations and his experiences on the USS Ohio.

Merrimon Lecture to be given

Dr. Jared Diamond, professor of physiology at the University of California-Los Angeles Medical School, will deliver the annual Merrimon Lecture in Medicine Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Berryhill Hall.

Diamond has written over 100 papers in the fields of membrane physiology and evolutionary ecology. He is also an active environmentalist and a writer of popular science.

The Merrimon Lecture was established in 1966 by the late Dr. Louise Merrimon Perry to promote study of traditions of medicine and bioethics. The lecture is free and open to the public.

sources, the platform said. It also suggested that a tax increase may be necessary to fund increased spending.

Regarding the U.S. trade deficit, the platform said tax breaks for industrial development have been used to move manufacturing industry abroad, and measures of protectionism have led to retaliation by United States' trading partners, aggravating the trade deficit and leading to job losses in the United States.

"We cry out for 'a level playing field' while digging the hole that keeps us from being competitive," the Young Democrats said in their platform. "The Reagan Administration's adherence to laissez-faire economics in a world of assisted industry keeps digging our hole deeper."

Instead, the Young Democrats encouraged Reagan to adopt economic policies that incorporate successful policy elements of U.S. trading partners and suggested that major industrial nations establish rules for international trade.

The Young Democrats linked economic performance to education in its platform, saying that "investing in the educational system is the key to making us competitive in the world market."

Their recommendations included higher teacher salaries, measures to reduce illiteracy and high school curricula grounded in basics such as English, math and science.

Other planks in the platform included:

- a temporary moratorium on farm foreclosures;

- a commitment to economic justice through affirmative action, and

- a commitment to foreign policies that "reflect the interest of all nations, not just our self-interest."

"We hope to get our platform incorporated into the state and national platforms," said Jim Gallaher, president of the statewide organization. "But we also need to branch out and disseminate the platform to grass roots organizations and college campuses."

Of 11 resolutions submitted in conjunction by the UNC-Orange County delegation, the delegates debated and passed only one.

The resolution, written by Robert Page of UNC, opposed the nomination of Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court. The resolution urged the president to "present a nominee who supports civil rights, recognizes the right to privacy and defends free speech."

Although the Senate voted last week to reject Bork's nomination, Page said the resolution was appropriate.

"We will go on record for opposing Bork for these reasons, and we would oppose another candidate for these reasons," Page said.

In a related meeting held after the convention, UNC student Nancy Johnson was elected treasurer of the N.C. Federation of College Democrats.

BLUE-WHITE BASKETBALL

Be among the first to see the 1987-88 basketball Tar Heels, including the debut of Carolina's new freshmen!

Student tickets are now available for the Blue-White basketball games. The first game will be played in the Smith Center immediately following the Carolina-Clemson football game on November 7. The halftime will only be five minutes so you can get out in time for your Saturday night plans.

The second Blue-White game will be played at 7:30 PM on Saturday evening, November 14 in Carmichael Auditorium (Nostalgia Night in Carmichael).

HOW TO GET YOUR TICKETS:

Present your student ID and athletic pass at the Smith Center Box office between 8:00 AM and 5:00 PM. Students may also purchase guest tickets for $5.00 in addition to their complimentary student ticket.

BLOCK SEATING AVAILABLE

Student groups of 50 or more are welcome to send a representative to the Ticket Office with the groups athletic passes for block seating.
