Tar Heels host thin Clemson Sunday

By KEITH PARSONS
Staff Writer

On paper, Sunday's game with Clemson shapes up as an easy North Carolina victory. Every positional edge, with the possible exception of point guard, goes to the ninth-ranked Tar Heels.

Moreover North Carolina has already lost two home games this season. That's double the number of home losses for UNC in the Smith Center's first two seasons, so how could the Tar Heels possibly lose this one?

It is with this in mind that the Tar Heels take on the Clemson Tigers at 2 p.m. Sunday in the Smith Center. Clemson is not exactly a Temple or Duke, as proven by the Tigers' loss Wednesday night in Greensboro to Wake Forest. Of course, we all remember who else lost to the Deacons in Greensboro earlier this season, don't we?

Clemson has a dangerous team, one capable of spectacular things. However, this year, coach Cliff Ellis' team has not shown the consistency to threaten Boise State, much less a perennial ACC title contender like UNC.

With J.R. Reid apparently back to form and Jeff Lebo playing solidly as ever, the Tigers should have little to growl about on Sunday.

Clemson, however, did not go down easily in the first meeting between the two, trailing by only four with 4:42 to play before losing 88-66. The Tar Heels then outscored the Tigers 22-2 down the stretch, including a 17-0 run to the final buzzer.

But if you ask Tar Heel coach Dean

	Clemson	Edge	UNC
Backcourt	Senior Grayson Marshall (7.3 ppg) won't score much, but dishes out 6.3 assists per game. Soph Tim Kincaid has increased his scoring to 9.7 per game, but is green.		Junior Jeff Lebo (13.7 ppg) bombs with the best of 'em. Averages 4.7 assists, too. Senior Ranzino Smith (12.5 ppg) provides offense, but not much defense or ball handling.
Frontcourt	Soph Elden Campbell (18.6 ppg) is the Tigers' leader, scoring 20 last time vs. Heels. Jerry Pryor (11.9) is a disappointment this year, but frosh Dale Davis (7.4 ppg) is impressive.		J.R. Reid has slipped a bit in scoring, but still throws in 18.5 ppg. Scott Williams (11.9 ppg) loves his foul-line jumper. Steve Bucknall (8.8) must recover from poor showing vs. Temple.
Depth	Ughhh! Like Wake Forest, Tigers' problem is the bench. Frosh Ricky Jones scores 5.6 per game, soph Sean Tyson 5.1. Oh well, at least Donnell Bruce played Wed. night.		Everyone waits for Kevin Madden (8.5 ppg) to do something great. Tar Heels are getting good help from freshmen Rick Fox and King Rice, with Rice coming off his best game.
Defense	Tigers only give up 69.4 ppg, third best in the ACC. The men in orange also lead in field goal percentage, .436. Grayson Marshall nabs 1.9 steals per game, good for second.		Tar Heels still give up a lot of points, 73.8 per night, to be exact. Teams shoot .474 against them, too. Scott Williams picks up 1.6 steals per game. Tar Heel defense is average.
Coaching	Cliff Ellis may be able to croon a country tune, but the jury is still out on his coaching prowess. After a dream season last year, the Sta-Put man is having a horrible time of it in 1988.		Dean Smith didn't seem too worried with Temple loss. Of course, he knew all along that the Heels were inexperienced. A third loss in the Smith Center would be unlikely.

— compiled by Chris Spencer

Smith about this game, he will give his standard answer.

"We must focus on a Clemson team which just had a big win over Virginia," Smith said. "They're playing like they did earlier in the season when they were going so well."

The last time Smith's Tar Heels were defeated by 20 or more points was by Clemson, way back in 1977. North Carolina suffered a defeat of similar proportions this past Sunday, getting thrashed 83-66 by top-ranked Temple. Smith thinks the loss to the Owls may have been a blessing.

"Sometimes a crushing defeat is even more valuable than a two-point loss in learning," Smith said.

The Tigers do not present the same matchup problems for the Tar Heels that the Owls did. Sophomore center Elden Campbell plays strong inside, and frosh Dale Davis is an improving force beside Campbell. But Clemson does not have the depth of North Carolina, and the Tigers' guard play, excluding Marshall, is shaky.

Swimming out front in ACCs

From staff reports

RALEIGH — North Carolina freshman John Davis qualified for the NCAA's in two events Thursday night, setting a school record in the 200-yard individual medley, to help stake the Tar Heels to a sizeable first-day lead in the ACC Men's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Davis, a native of Wilton, Conn., covered 200 yards in 1:49.59 to qualify for the NCAA meet this April in Indianapolis. Later in the evening Davis swam the third leg of UNC's winning 400-yard medley relay, joining Rich Gleason, John Fischetti and Larry Bloch.

North Carolina, looking for its first conference meet title in five years, compiled a total of 232 points, 57 ahead of defending ACC champion Virginia. Clemson is third with 130 points.

Other strong events for UNC were the 50-yard freestyle, in which Tod Schroeder's time of 20.30 seconds took first, and 1-meter diving, where freshman Nunzio Esposto's 491.60 score was good for second.

UNC picked up 33 points on the Cavaliers in the 1-meter dive, prompting Tar Heel coach Frank Comfort to term their team's performance "the finest round of diving that a North Carolina team has ever had."

Other strong finishers for the Tar Heels were Tony Monasterio (fourth in the 500 free), Jed Guenther (third in the 200 IM) and Bloch (second in the 50 free).

Lady Vols roll past UNC women, 88-65

By BRENDAN MATHEWS
Staff Writer

Usually you have to wait until the summer to see an air show. Mom and dad take you to the fairgrounds and you stare at skywriters and barnstormers until your neck hurts and you've got a sunburned nose.

Thursday night in Carmichael Auditorium the defending national champion Lady Volunteers of Tennessee put on an air show of their own, bombing away from the outside en route to a 88-65 win over UNC. And no one got sunburned.

Tennessee scored first, with a Jennifer Tuggle 21-footer that was a sign of things to come. But the Heels were able to answer back and take an early 4-3 lead thanks to baskets by senior forwards Kathy Wilson and Tia Poindexter.

UNC recovered from another Tuggle trey and went out in front 11-10 behind an old-fashioned three-point play from guard Chryss Watts with 14:28 to go in the half. Wilson, who finished the night with 15, increased UNC's lead to three with a shot from the paint at 13:50.

But sooner or later the third-ranked Lady Vols had to take over. After tying it up at 17 with 10:46 to go, they went on a 5-0 run and never looked back. The Heels were able to pull within three at 24-21 on a Tia Poindexter layup, but Tonya Edwards hit a pair of free throws for Tennessee, and UNC never came closer than three again.

Even more damaging to UNC than the accuracy of Tennessee's shooters was the loss of ACC scoring leader Wilson, who picked up her third foul with just under 10 minutes to play and spent the rest of the half on the bench. With her off the court, the Tar Heels went flat.

"When Kathy Wilson picked up her third foul," UNC coach Sylvia Hatchell said, "it really took the wind out of our sails."

Tennessee made things even more difficult for the North Carolina offense by turning up the defensive pressure. They forced 21 turnovers and dominated the defensive boards, pulling down 25 rebounds and ruining the Heels' opportunities for second-chance points.

Tennessee sealed UNC's fate with runs of four, nine and six straight points to end the half with a comfortable 45-28 lead.

"They gave us the outside shot and we took it," Summitt said. "The strength of our team is the perimeter game."

Hatchell agreed, saying "Tennessee does every phase of the game extremely well. Tonight they shot very well."
