Baseball suffers 3-game sweep

From staff reports
NEW ORLEANS, La. — The 13th-ranked New Orleans baseball team swept a three-game series from North Carolina over the weekend, capping it off with a 10-3 thumping Sunday afternoon.

On Friday, the Privateers used a four-run fourth inning to break open a 2-2 tie on their way to a 9-6 win. After Douglas Odor tripled and was cut down at the plate trying to score on a grounder, Brian Traxler stroked a three-run homer.

The Tar Heels battled back as Tom Nevin, who doubled to open the sixth inning, scored on Jesse Levis' bloop single. In the seventh, Dave Arendas walked and scored on Nevin's single.

But New Orleans put the game out of reach after RBI hits by Odor and Jeff Igram stretched the lead to 8-5. Sophomore John Thoden dropped to 0-1 on the year with the loss.

On Saturday, the Privateers piled up runs in the first four innings to blast their way to a 17-5 victory. UNC chipped at the lead in the sixth on a Chris DeFranco double, a Nevin walk and a Darin Campbell triple. Levis added a solo shot in the ninth.

Tar Heel sophomore Michael Hoog took the loss to even his record at 1-1. Joe Slusarski pushed his record to 3-1 with the win.

New Orleans showed no mercy Sunday as they closed out the sweep with a 10-3 win. The Privateers again used a big fourth inning to win, this time tallying five runs in that frame. The Tar Heels actually led in the top of the fourth, picking up three on Chris Lauria's two-run blast and Steve Estroff's solo dinger.

But the Privateers took advantage of tiring UNC pitcher Jim Dougherty to load the bases. After freshman Greg Gresham replaced Dougherty, Ingram slashed a two-run single and Phil Espinosa roped a two-run double to put the game out of reach.

Dougherty fell to 0-1 with the loss, while Greg Perschke evened his win at 1-1.

The Tar Heels, who fell to 2-3 on the season with the weekend shellacking, next play Seton Hall Friday in their home opener. Game time at Boshamer Stadium is 3 p.m.

Krege, Bristow lead tennis by UNC-Asheville

From staff reports
 The North Carolina men's tennis squad upped its record to 3-0 Saturday by crushing UNC-Asheville 8-1 at the UNC Tennis Center.

The Tar Heels, who dumped Guilford by the same score Wednesday, lost the first match before rattling off eight straight wins. Asheville's Jeff Duncan downed No. 1 Don Johnson 2-6, 7-5, 6-4 to start off the day.

But UNC quickly righted themselves at No. 2 as Greensboro sophomore James Krege whipped Butch Hayes 6-4, 6-0. John Bristow then thumped Fred Weinman 6-2, 6-2, and the rout was on.

Other singles winners were Andre Janasik, Carter Griffin and Derek Weilbaecher. On the doubles side, Kessler-Janasik beat Duncan-Hayes 6-4, 6-2; Krege-Bristow crushed Weinman-Freeman 6-1, 6-0; and Griffin-Weilbaecher closed out the slaughter by beating Molnar-Stevenson 6-2, 6-4.

The Tar Heels face Penn State today at 2 p.m. at the Tennis Center.

Williams hits for 20 to lead Tar Heels past Clemson

By JAMES SUROWIECKI
 Senior Writer

Laugh, and the whole world laughs with you. Well, if that's true, then the globe was giggling Sunday as North Carolina rolled over Clemson, 88-52, in a less than perfectly played laughter that left many questions unanswered.

The win moved UNC to 21-4 overall, 10-2 in the ACC, while the debacle dropped Clemson to 12-13, 2-9 in the conference.

The big man for the Tar Heels was sophomore Scott Williams, who finished with 20 points and delivered the knockout blow midway in the second half, scoring eight points in 3½ minutes.

That streak began with two free throws after Williams was fouled by Tim Kincaid, who had a disastrous game. Williams followed that with a soft baseline jumper, then canned an 18-footer from the top of the key before tipping in a J.R. Reid miss. When the Hacienda Heights, Calif., native had finished, the Tar Heels were up 61-34, and the time had come to clear the benches.

Actually, to call Williams' work a knockout blow may be overstating the case, for the game's outcome was never in doubt. Clemson, playing without star center Elden Campbell and key reserve Sean Tyson, who were suspended for the game for their involvement in selling complimentary tickets, tried to go to a spread offense in the first half, but executed the slowdown with consummate ineffectiveness and missed a succession of open shots.

North Carolina played a gambling defense, trying to force the action, and the Tigers seemed baffled by the entire situation. Clemson had 10 turnovers in the first 20 minutes and shot a miserable 7-of-24 from the field. What that meant was that the Tar Heels had an opportunity to practice their defense and pick up some easy rebounds.

"They wanted to hold the ball against us, but we really wanted to force the tempo," said UNC guard Jeff Lebo. "We got a chance to use our scramble defense and we really switched it up. Sometimes we trapped and took the guards out of the game so their big men could play three-on-three with our big people. But the slowdown's not their style. It's not how they like to play."

North Carolina, though, was far from perfect in the first half, shooting just 32.1 percent from the floor. But the Tar Heels did a good job of holding on to the ball, which they did not do last weekend against Temple, and hit 16 of 19 free throws in the first 20 minutes.

Clemson stayed close early, but after a Jerry Pryor basket with 8:59 left, UNC went on a 17-4 run. The Tigers had just two hoops in the last nine minutes and ended the half down 35-18.

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis, flying in the face of all the evidence, remained unconvinced the game was destined to be a blowout.

"It could have been a lot closer at the half," Ellis said. "We missed four- and five-footers and just couldn't finalize the shots. It doesn't matter what kind of offense you run, if you've got five-footers you've got to make them."

In the second half, not even the five-footers could rescue the Tigers, as UNC took the ball to the hole, dominating the boards and committing few errors on the offensive end. UNC coach Dean Smith began emptying his bench with eight minutes left and eventually made sure all his players got on the court.

As it was Senior Day, Joe Jenkins started the game, but Jenkins didn't get a chance to shine until the end, when he hit two 18-footers and grabbed three rebounds.

The more illustrious Tar Heels, though, turned in mediocre performances. Lebo, who seemed content to kick the ball inside, was 0-of-3 from the field and finished with just two points, while J.R. Reid continued his enigmatic ways, scoring just 12 points and grabbing six rebounds against a team devoid of interior defense.

In the end, then, the game was a comfortable way to finish UNC's home schedule and erase the memory of the Temple shellacking. But whether the Tar Heels have truly rounded into form was a question unanswerable after Sunday's game.

"We were pleased with our performance today, and we were pleased with the win," said senior Ranzino Smith, who finished with 12 points. "It boosts this team up a whole lot. If I had my choice I'd rather win by 30 than by one."

In other words, he'd rather laugh.
