Tar Heels look to derail 16th-ranked Wolfpack

By NATALIE SEKICKY

It's time for the ladies' installment in the continuing saga of Carolina basketball drama as the Wolfpack of N.C. State invades Carmichael Auditorium to take on the Tar Heels at 7:30 tonight.

NCSU will bring its impressive record of 13-2, 6-0 in the ACC, and 16th national ranking to town to face the young Tar Heels, who are understandably struggling against fierce ACC competition. The UNC women have compiled a respectable 9-8 overall mark, but their inexperience is reflected in their conference count of 1-3.

Tonight's contest will definitely be a challenge for the home team. Coach Sylvia Hatchell has instituted the transition game to best accommodate her many young, but quick, players. However, the Pack plays the same game and plays it better. The Tar Heels have been hurt repeatedly by poor decision-making when trying to finish the break this season, and this is not surprising from such a youthful squad. On the other hand, Coach Kay better ballhandlers than their Tar Heel counterparts. The result is an 87.5 points per game average for the Pack in ACC competition, including four games over the century mark. By comparison, UNC is scoring at a 77.5 ppg clip.

Leading NCSU in the scoring department is sophomore sensation Andrea Stinson, a 5-foot-10 inch guard/forward who has been lighting up the scoreboards with 26.6 ppg, 31.2 in the ACC. Stinson, who has returned from Prop 48 land with a vengeance, shows some versatility by leading the Pack in steals as well, with 53 thefts this season.

Complementing Stinson are 6-3 sophomore center Rhonda Mapp (13.2 ppg, 8.7 rpg), 5-5 senior point guard Debbie Bertrand (7.3 ppg, 7.3 apg), 6-0 junior forward Sandee Smith (4.7 ppg, 4.3 rpg), and 5-10 junior forward Krista Kilburn (7.3 ppg, 3.9 rpg).

If UNC is to pull off the upset, they will need a strong team game, with a good showing from senior Yow's troops are older, wiser and center Merlaine Oden. Oden leads the team in the numbers department (12.5 ppg, 9.3 rpg) and provides the senior leadership UNC so sorely needs.

Also critical for the Tar Heels chances are three starting freshmen: point guard Emily Johnson (7.6 ppg, 7.0 apg), forward Dawn Bradley (8.3 ppg, 5.2 rpg) and guard LeAnn Kennedy (8.8 ppg, 4.4 rpg).

An interesting sidebar to tonight's contest is the coaching match-up. Hatchell was an assistant to Yow during the Seoul Olympics last summer. The two coaches will know each other's system and strategy could play a crucial role in the game. Hatchell might choose to slow the tempo in order to put a damper on the Wolfpack's hyperactive scoring

In any case, it's red and blue at it again this evening, but the roles are definitely reversed. It will take a very grown-up effort from UNC freshmen playing in their first State game in order to prevent the Pack from gaining some revenge for Saturday's loss.

Carousing in New Orleans

"Waaaaar Eagle! Hey!"

I couldn't believe it. Here I was, clutching a Sugar Bowl ticket in my sweaty palm, pushing my way through a throng of Auburn and Florida State fans, desperate for my first glimpse inside the Superdome. We weren't even in the building yet, and these crazy people were already cheering.

It was Jan. 2, a breezy warm day down South. McClure, one of my best friends, had just graduated from Auburn, and he and I, along with Foster, another friend from my hometown, had made the 12hour trip to the South's hottest town, New Orleans, for a little football, some Cajun cooking and a lot of partying.

Foster and I both relished the chance to see some big-time fanatical football. You see, we don't have that right now in Chapel Hill. Foster, though, was a little more starved than I was - he goes to East Carolina. 'Nuf said.

And, of course, we got more than our share of college football, Deep South style. "Nawlins" is not only a wonderfully beautiful city, but on this New Year's Eve weekend, it served as home to thousands of rowdy, partying fans.

Chris Spencer Asst. Sports Editor

Not only did we see the usual crazily-dressed fans, but we also saw the FSU faithful in full Indian dress, all the way down to their moccasins. Florida State, whose fans have the niftiest cheer in college football with their arm-tossing Seminole chant, scored all of its points in the first half and then held off a late Auburn rally (thanks to Deion Sanders' end-zone interception of Auburn quarterback Reggie Slack as time expired) to win, 13-7.

And, yes, FSU cornerback Derrick Dodge did interfere with Auburn wideout Freddy Weygand on the play before Sanders' interception. Not only could we see that from our third-deck seats (yes, the Superdome has a third deck), but the giant instant-replay screens at each end of the Dome proved it over and over again.

We had begun the day with a po' boy (similiar to a submarine sandwich) at Mother's, like we did the two days before this one. And like those previous two days, we proceeded from there to the French Quarter.

So it should come as no surprise that after the game we went back down to our home away from our hotel. Think of Franklin Street blocked off for a party every day, and you've got Bourbon Street. Sort of.

After a drink at Daiquri's, Foster and McClure had to have some more oysters, and we headed to Hollihan's, where they could eat until they threw up, if they wanted, even at two in the morning. There we met up with Chip and Chris, two bartenders at Bub O'Malley's, who flew in - not for the game and the party - but for the party.

I wished them luck on their return trip to Chapel Hill, silently thanking God that they were flying instead of driving, and we headed to Pat O'Brien's for one last hurricane.

When we stepped out of the world-famous bar, it was about three in the morning. Bars in New Orleans don't close until five - if they ever close at all. I never saw one closed.

Hey, Mack, is there any way we can get a Sugar Bowl bid next year?

Illinois is new Number One; Tar Heels move up to No. 7

Illinois became the first team this season other than Duke to hold the No. 1 position in The Associated Minnesota. Press college basketball poll on Monday. It also marked the first time the Fighting Illini have held that spot in the regular season in 37 years.

The only undefeated Division I team, Illinois received 62 of the 65 first-place votes cast and 1,296 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. The Fighting Illini were pushed to the limit Sunday to win their 17th straight, a 103-92 double-overtime victory over Georgia Tech.

The last time Illinois held the No. I spot in the regular season was in the poll released on Jan. 22, 1952 when it took over the top spot from Kansas. The Fighting Illini held it just one week as they lost to DePaul four days later.

Duke had held the No. I spot in the preseason poll and in the first nine regular-season votings, but the Blue Devils, 13-2, lost their first games of the season this week, a 20-point home loss to North Carolina and a 75-71 loss at Wake Forest to fall to eighth in the voting.

Georgetown, Louisville and Oklahoma each advanced one place in the voting as did Illinois.

The Hoyas, 14-1, took second with one first-place vote and 1,173 points, just six more than Louisville, 13-2, which had the other two first-place

Oklahoma, 15-2, moved up to fourth with 1,079 points and was followed by fellow Big Eight member Missouri, 16-3, which received 939 points in moving up three places from last week.

The Tar Heels had fallen to 13th in last week's voting, the first time in 63 polls dating to the 1983-84 season they had not been in the Top Ten.

Duke, Seton Hall and Michigan rounded out the Top Ten.

The Blue Devils received 860 points, while Seton Hall, 17-1, had 788 and Michigan, 15-3 after a 71-68 loss to Wisconsin, dropped from sixth with 719 points.

Florida State, 14-1, led the Second Ten followed by Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse, North Carolina State, Indiana, Ohio State, Kansas, Stanford and Providence.

Last week's Second Ten was Syracuse, Seton Hall, North Carolina, Florida State, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Kansas, Tennessee, Indiana and Stanford.

Providence re-enters the Top Twenty after a one-week absence. The Friars earned their ranking after starting the season with a 12-0 record. They lost to Villanova and dropped out but returned this week despite an 80-77 loss to Georgetown. Providence followed that with a 15-point victory at Pittsburgh.

Tennessee was the only team to fall from the rankings as the Volunteers fell to 12-3 after losing 66-65 at home to Kentucky.
