Evenings of short plays featured in Lab Theatre's season line-up

By ANDREW LAWLER
Staff Writer

The final shows of the Lab season run the gamut from Mamet to Churchill to everybody's favorite World War I flying Ace Snoopy.

The Lab continues its annual "Labfest," several short plays done on the same night, with two productions. The first is "Keep Tightly Closed In a Cool Dry Place," directed by senior Kasey Jones. This surreal piece is the story of three men in prison who are attempting to come to terms with the events that have placed them there.

This is followed by David Mamet's "A Life in the Theatre," which Lab board member Bobby Wallace described as a story about experiences. It focuses on one older actor who, during intermissions and rehearsals, passes on what he has learned to a younger actor.

Labfest runs April 1-4.

The next production is "Fen" by noted playwright Caryl Churchill. A fen is low, flat, swampy land common to parts of the United Kingdom. The play profiles people who live on this fen. "Fen" will run April 9-11 and is directed by Maria Earman.

The final play of the season will be "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown." This musical account of the "Peanuts" gang asks those age-old questions: Will Charlie Brown ever talk to the little red-haired girl or win a baseball game? Will Lucy ever get Schroeder to look at her instead of Beethoven? Will Snoopy ever get that dratted Red Baron? This perennial favorite is directed by Amy Rosenberg and will run April 16-18.

Dorrance

I loss to No. 5 South Carolina in the NCAA round of 16.

Having one man coach both teams was not part of the original plan, according to Dorrance.

"When I was hired by (then UNC Athletic Director) Bill Cobey, it was basically to coach the men, and they added the women on later," Dorrance said.

Dorrance starred as a player for the Tar Heels from 1971-73, earning All-Atlantic Coast Conference honors in each of his three seasons.

Bolowich, a 34-year-old native of Edenkoben, West Germany, spent 17 years as a semiprofessional player and four years as a coach in his homeland. He joined UNC as a part-time assistant in 1986 before moving up to full-time assistant prior to the 1987 season.

According to Darren Royer, a senior goalkeeper on the UNC men's team, the move did not come as a surprise.

"They gave the job to Elmar a month ago; I heard about this two weeks into the semester," said Royer, who did not attend Wednesday night's meeting.

Missimo, who has two years of eligibility left, greeted the change with a much different tone.

"We knew three weeks ago about the change, and it was kept kind of hush-hush until it was official," Missimo said. "Both parties (Dorrance and Bolowich) wanted it to happen and it happened."

"Anson's still the director of soccer, and we all respect him. This frees his hands up so he can spend more time with his family and it will give Elmar a chance to show his wizardry."

Dorrance and his wife, M'Liss, have two young daughters, ages nine and six.

Added Missimo, "(The meeting) was kind of sad in a few aspects. (Dorrance) was only the second men's soccer coach ever in Carolina history. It's a big adjustment, although usually when you make adjustments, it's because of some tragedy or problem in the program."

"This is no big deal to us. This is a positive move."
