UNC Steve Bucknall seems to get this team going at the most crucial Backcourt times. He'll go to the hoop or hit the 3. Jeff Lebo's shot isn't all the way back yet, but he contributes. J.R. Reid will be scoring and rebounding past curfew. Kevin Frontcourt Madden takes it inside effectively. Scott Williams has come up big with rebounds, points and blocks. Rick Fox has developed into the inside-outside offensive force that Depth every great team needs. King Rice handles the ball well, plays good 'D'. Chilcutt hits the boards. The Tar Heels have upped their defensive effort a notch or two Defense for postseason play, and it shows. Bucknall, Rice, Williams,

Point guard Rumeal Robinson is the Wolverines' floor leader. An excellent passer, he can also penetrate and score. 6-7 Mike Griffin is a heady role player. 6-7 forward Glen Rice is one of the best inside-outside players in the nation. 6-10 F Terry Mills can also go outside. Loy Vaught cleans the glass in the middle. C Mark Hughes, at 6-8, goes outside for points. 6-9 G/F Sean Higgins guns from the perimeter and loves to run. Demetrius Calip handles the ball well at the point. Don't be suprised to see the Heels hit more than half of their shots tonight. Vaught, Hughes and Griffin are solid. Overall, they can't stop the Heels inside.

Former Michigan coach Bill Frieder picked a great time to announce his move to Arizona State, didn't he? His assistant, Steve Fisher, is 2-0 off the bench.

Coaching

Fate is one thing, premeditation

another. Through the luck of the draw, or perhaps a latent sadistic streak on the part of the NCAA tournament selection committee, Michigan and North Carolina will play tonight in Lexington, Ky., with membership in the Elite Eight at stake.

The curious part of the matchup (10 p.m., WRAL-TV, Ch. 5) is that it will mark the third consecutive year the 10th-ranked Wolverines and the fifth-ranked Tar Heels have met in the NCAAs. UNC (29-7) won both ing fashion and will be a slight favorite to turn the hat trick this evening in Rupp Arena, site of the its side. Southeast Region semifinals and

The winner will meet either topseeded Oklahoma or Virginia in our game if we expect to advance. Saturday afternoon's regional final.

But before anyone starts feeling too sorry for Michigan, it should be mentioned that this time the Wolverines may actually have the advantage on several levels.

First, of course, is the simple threetimes-no-way revenge factor. After losing to the Tar Heels in the second previous meetings in rather convinc- round in 1987 and in the round of 16 last year, Michigan's upper-crust program has the law of averages on

As UNC coach Dean Smith said, "They're just a very powerful team, and we'll have to be at the top of We've knocked them out the last two years, and I don't like that psychological situation especially."

Secondly, there's the addition-bysubtraction factor. We're referring, of course, to Bill Frieder, who resigned as Michigan's head coach the day before the NCAAs started in order to take the Arizona State job.

Interim coach Steve Fisher, who spent seven years as Frieder's top assistant, has done an admirable job guiding the Wolverines through stiff challenges in the first two rounds.

Had Frieder been in the coach's box for those two contests, Michigan might well be back in Ann Arbor gearing up for spring thaw. Not that Frieder wasn't successful - in nine years his Michigan teams won 191 games. Problem was, the Wolverines' March performances never measured up to the public's expectations.

Two years ago in Charlotte, UM's year ended with a 109-97 loss to the Tar Heels, who were led by thenfreshman J.R. Reid's 27-point, 10rebound night. Last season in Seattle, UNC sent Michigan packing once again, as Scott Williams scored 19 points while Reid added 18 and a game-high eight boards.

Reid will be back in the lineup for the Tar Heels tonight after missing the 88-81 second-round win over UCLA for violating curfew. That's the good news. The bad news is that Glen Rice, Michigan's stud forward, is also still around.

Rice, a 6-foot-7 senior, was named Big Ten player of the year after averaging 24.7 points and 6.2 rebounds this season. What's more, Rice has been at his best in tournament time, scoring 137 points in his last four NCAA outings (a 34.3 average), including 39 last season against the Tar Heels.

"The number one focus for us on the offensive end is Glen Rice," Fisher said. "He's our first and foremost option. We've got to do everything we can to get Glen Rice his shots."

Michigan's "1-A option," as Fisher puts it, is 6-10, 230-pound junior Terry Mills (11.2 points, 5.8 rebounds). The one-time Prop 48 casualty is similar to Syracuse's Derrick Coleman in that both players can dominate or flop depending on their moods.

Joining Rice and Mills on the front line is Loy Vaught, a 6-9, 225-pound banger who averaged 13.9 points and a team-leading eight rebounds. Mark Hughes and Sean Higgins, both of whom could start for most teams, provide depth.

Michigan's front line is imposing, but, according to Fisher, "the whole key is Rumeal (Robinson, the point guard). We need his decision-making, we need him playing with confidence and poise and not frustrated. He's playing well for us."

The 6-2 junior doesn't get as much ink as Sherman Douglas and Mookie Blaylock, but Robinson (14.5 ppg) can really play. In last year's tournament, he burned UNC for 29 points, and it'll take a premium defensive effort from Steve Bucknall and King Rice to prevent a repeat.

Michigan's Fisher a perfect 2-0

From Associated Press reports

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Michigan interim coach Steve Fisher is one of the few in his profession who is even better than North Carolina's Dean Smith when it comes to winning percentage as a head coach.

Smith enters the game with a career record of 667-189, a winning percentage of .779, second among all active Division I coaches with at least 10 years' experience.

Fisher comes in with a perfect

1.000. He has won his only two games Michigan, you have to have the same as head coach since Bill Frieder announced hours before the tournament began that he was becoming head coach at Arizona State.

"I have the utmost respect for Coach Smith and I always have," Fisher said Wednesday. "It has been hard to deal with the pressures and things have been a little different. But I've been a coach for 21 years and coaching is teaching. It doesn't matter whether it's high school, CYO or at type of philosophy."

Smith praised Fisher for the way he has handled the situation.

"He has handled it extremely well. He has been poised and confident," Smith said. "It's a big jump from assistant coach, when you're making suggestions, to head coach, where you're making the decisions. He had to do it under a microscope and he should be congratulated."
