Carolina Union lineup has something for everyone

By ELIZABETH MURRAY

Staff Writer

You're going to summer school, working a lot, hoping that money will mysteriously turn up in your pocket, and wishing that there were more things to do during your time off. Is that it?

The Carolina Union is providing programs this summer that might make students feel a little better about being so poor and bored during the summer months. Although it would be impossible for the Union to function as always during the less-crowded summer months, it is going to provide free movies, indoor and outdoor concerts, billiards and study breaks.

Upcoming movies include "Gorillas in the Mist" on June 7, "The Untouchables" June 12 and "Beverly Hills Cop" June 14. Movies are shown at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in the Union Auditorium. Other movies in June will include "Fatal Attraction," "Beaches" and "Airplane!"

The Union Underground will also be kicked in during the summer. What's the Underground and is it legal? It is the lower level of the Union which includes the Cabaret, billiards and bowling. And it is legal.

For June 5 the Cabaret has booked Drach and Droll, a band offering familiar blues, swing and country music. The band will play from 8-10 p.m. and students will get in free.

The North Carolina School of the Arts Jazz Quintet will appear in the Cabaret June 8, one of their last appearances prior to the Quintet's Italian tour. It also will be free to students and will start at 8 p.m.

Deals in bowling include half price on Tuesdays after 4 p.m., and for billiards half price on Thursdays after 4 p.m.

For women students only, there will be a program "Powerplay" which will include free instruction in billiards. "It's kind of like — not a yuppie craze — but just a trend where women are starting to play billiards more," said LeAndrea E. Drum, assistant program advisor for the Carolina Union. "We're focusing on that and decided to create a program to highlight it."

The response to these activities will determine if other things can be added to the programs already available, according to Carolina Union program advisor Nancy Bolish.

Many students are either not aware of the programs available to them or they are just not interested, said Bolish. "Part of it is that we don't know if there is anybody out there or if anybody cares," she said. "I hope so."

The programming for this summer was primarily the job of one person, the assistant program advisor, but there is a summer programming committee made up of volunteers, though not many of them. "I'm hoping that anybody who wants to get involved in either generating ideas that have already been placed or working on publicity and promotion will step forward and come on in," Drum said. "It's not that we want a big-time commitment. It can be whatever they want it to be."

What the programmers want to know when a particular program or series of programs fails is whether the students are really that busy or whether they are just apathetic. "It's amazing to me how many people don't know that the Cabaret even exists," said Karen Moore, a senior speech communications major from Michigan who has been elected Cabaret chairperson for the upcoming academic year.

Moore said her general goals for next year are to increase knowledge of the Cabaret and what it has to offer. "I would like it to be known and for people to be seeking out what's going on at the Cabaret. I want people to know something good will be there for them," she said.

Campus Police Roundup

• Police picked up a man at the Student Union for defacing signs May 24. When he was checked out through the National Crime Information Center (NCIC), it was noted that he was listed as "wanted" with an arrest outstanding. Authorities in Morganton were contacted and it was determined that this was not the same man. The mistake had been made due to improper use of a Social Security card.

• The security alarm at the Chancellor's home was set off by mistake May 24.

• No alarms were set off, but there was evidence at Kenan Field House that someone had been in the Jimmy Jerome Lounge watching television, drinking beer, etc. May 22. A note had been left praising the television and implying that the facilities had been enjoyed by more than one person.

greater, he said.

"The (Horace Williams) airport is part of a huge tract of land that in many respects represents the future of the University."

Howes sees an "incremental approach" to expanding the campus on the Horace Williams site over the next 50 years, he said.

An extension to Pittsboro Street, which would require the removal of the Zeta Psi fraternity house, is "on the currently adopted thoroughfare plan" and is not a dead issue, Howes said.

But, although the mayor voted in favor of the planning stage of the project, he has never voted for funding it and has no plan to do so, he said.

"I don't think the need for it has been clearly established, nor have the alternatives been thoroughly examined," Howes said. There is no consensus on the issue, he said.

Howes believes that recycling will become a more important issue. "Chapel Hill is psychologically willing to do recycling and we're going to have to," he said. The town needs to recycle to prolong the life of its landfill and to protect the environment, Howes said. Recycling requires a national approach from government and the private sector to really work, but Chapel Hill can have an impact well beyond the city limits if it recycles, he said.
