

'Wildest Rolling Stone' calms down for children

From Associated Press reports

LONDON — Rolling Stones guitarist Keith Richards said he kicked his heroin addiction because his children were exposed to repeated police raids. "I was on the run all the time," Richards said about his drug-taking in the 1970s when he lived with German actress Anita Pallenberg and their two children.

"My kids were growing up getting used to letting in hordes of policemen. There was a knock at the door: Is it room service or is it the cops?" he told British Broadcasting Corp. radio in a New York interview to be broadcast here next month.

The group is on a North American concert tour.

Richards, 45, known as "the wildest Rolling Stone," also admitted he feared being sent to prison.

"The funny thing with that stuff is that you don't particularly notice it until it comes to a huge head," Richards said. "In Canada, I guess I realized this could not go on any more. This had to stop." Richards was charged with heroin trafficking in Toronto in 1977 and escaped a heavy jail sentence by agreeing to a free concert for the blind and treatment for his addiction.

"I can't even imagine it now, some of the things I used to go through with that stuff," he said.

Mrs. Reagan supports D.A.R.E.

LOS ANGELES — Former first lady Nancy Reagan presented a $50,000 check for an anti-drug program as 600 chanting and cheering inner-city junior high school students responded to her pleas to stay away from drugs and alcohol.

"No matter what problems you have, no matter how bad you feel, drugs will make things unbelievably worse," Mrs. Reagan told the students gathered Wednesday in the John Muir Junior High School auditorium.

She then presented the oversized check, the first donation from the Nancy Reagan Foundation, for the D.A.R.E.

program that provides after-school activities to help keep students away from drugs.

Young's campaign coffers full

ATLANTA — Mayor Andrew Young is armed to march on the Statehouse with a half-million-dollar war chest filled by a $500-a-ticket businessmen's salute to the mayor.

The affair, sponsored by former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell, raised the money for Young's unofficial campaign for governor.

"I think it's going to be the largest fund-raiser in the history of Georgia politics," Young's campaign manager, former Vienna, Ga., Mayor Hobby Stripling, said of Wednesday night's black tie affair.

Stripling said the revenue could reach $750,000 if all commitments come in.

Bell chairs Young's recently formed campaign committee, Young Working for Georgia, although the mayor still has not officially announced that he will run for governor in the fall of 1990.

Singer faces drug charges

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Thomas DeBarge, a former member of the pop music group Switch and part of the singing DeBarge family, has been jailed on cocaine charges.

DeBarge was arraigned Wednesday in Grand Rapids and Wyoming district courts on separate charges of delivery of cocaine and delivery of imitation cocaine stemming from two alleged sales to undercover police in 1988.

DeBarge, 32, is charged with delivering a half-gram of cocaine the first time and one-sixteenth of an ounce the second time, police said.

DeBarge, who spent time in jail in 1986 on a cocaine conviction, was being held in the Kent County Jail on combined bonds of $4,500.

If convicted, DeBarge could face up to 20 years in prison.

DeBarge said in a 1986 interview that he became associated with drugs while a member of the music group Switch. "I was cool and I forgot where

I came from," said the member of the local family of 10 singers.

Ono sets up environmental project

TOKYO — Yoko Ono, the musician, artist and widow of ex-Beatle John Lennon, announced Thursday a multimillion-dollar project "based on John's spirit" to help clean up the environment and provide scholarships.

"I hope this program will help bring back much needed mental and physical health to our Earth and strengthen our unity as one world and one people," Ono, wearing her trademark wrap-around sun glasses, said at a news conference.

Ono said entertainers Michael Jackson, Billy Joel, David Bowie and Ringo Starr, among others, have pledged support for plans to raise money for "The Greening of the World" project.

Ono said the estimated $100 million to be raised would be used mainly for scholarships and to preserve the environment, especially forests.

Married bliss — at last

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — Defense Minister Bob Tizard married his Canadian World War II sweetheart Beryl Vignale, 45 years after they first became engaged and then lost track of each other.

Tizard advertised last year in Canadian newspapers for the woman, an aide said Thursday, and from time to time Tizard asked members of visiting Canadian delegations how to go about tracing a friend from the war years. He did not say how Tizard finally found her, but said they were reunited last year in Canada.

The pair first met and became engaged in Canada in 1944 when Tizard was stationed in the Royal New Zealand Air Force. Tizard was posted elsewhere and the couple drifted apart. In the intervening years they both married and divorced, and she became a successful executive in Ontario.

The aide, requesting anonymity, said the couple were married Wednesday.

Shelter asks who is Kitty Jordan?

From Associated Press reports

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Kitty Jordan reached Nashville with a name on a piece of paper in her pocket. She has stayed at a women's shelter since then, making friends and earning the respect of others. But who is she?

Kitty Jordan was the name on the paper, but she's not sure who she is. Doctors believe she is a legitimate amnesiac.

Police have appealed to the public for help in identifying the woman. With nine months of work behind them, they say they are running out of clues.

The woman, who is white and appears to be in her early to mid 40s, described her memory as "bits and pieces." The black-haired, brown-eyed woman said Wednesday she had an abusive ex-husband but has no memory of children.

She believes she is from Chicago where she worked in an office.

"I can remember driving into Chicago and seeing the skyline," she said at the shelter where she stays. "I remember having been a business office manager. I've worked with computers."

She is going by the name Kitty, "but it might have been a nickname," she said. "At this point I don't know my Social Security number. I can't work without one or do anything. I'm stuck in limbo."

I have to do something to get along with the rest of my life."

The woman is slightly overweight, has a Midwestern accent and has a scar from a hysterectomy, police said.

"She's fairly intelligent and she's kind of neat to talk to," police Lt. Tommy Jacobs said. "She does want to remember and just can't."

Chicago police have no one named Kitty Jordan listed as missing, he said.
