

Operation Hammer captures drug dealers, buyers

From Associated Press Reports
LOS ANGELES — A $25,000 Mercedes-Benz registered to singer-actress Apollonia was impounded along with 42 other vehicles during a crackdown on street drug dealers and buyers, authorities said.

Police Chief Daryl Gates displayed the 1985 Mercedes of Patricia "Apollonia" Bernhardt, 30, with several other cars at a news conference Monday.

Bernhardt was arrested for investigation of possessing a small amount of marijuana during the weekend "Operation Hammer" raids that netted 1,009 arrests, said Officer Don Lawrence.

Apollonia appeared in the movie "Purple Rain" and had a one-season roll on the prime time TV soap opera "Falcon Crest."

Since the crackdown program began in 1984, police have seized and sold some 840 vehicles worth about $4.3 million, Lawrence said.

Odd pair promotes shuttle
NEW YORK — Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig Jr. and former House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill don't usually see eye to eye, but they do agree, in a new advertising campaign, on the benefits of flying the Trump Shuttle.

Haig and O'Neill are among several odd couples seated together in television and newspaper ads. Others include author Norman Mailer with boxing promoter Don King, and sex counselor

Dr. Ruth Westheimer with fashion model Carol Alt.

"Each commercial focuses on an ironic juxtaposition," said Mark Messing, senior vice president at Scali, McCabe, Sloves. His ad agency is responsible for the campaign, which starts Wednesday in the shuttle cities of New York, Boston and Washington.

Developer Donald Trump bought the shuttle from strikebound Eastern Airlines in early June.

Murderer violates probation

From Associated Press Reports
AMSTERDAM, N.Y. — A man who helped kill and dismember a prostitute in Florida is violating his probation by being in New York state, but Florida doesn't want him, and New York officials said Tuesday they can't hold him.

James Whyte, 29, and two other men killed Kimberley Ann Hanlon of Tampa, Fla., and cut up her body with a chain saw in March 1985.

Hanlon's body was found in a freezer three years later. After his arrest last year, Whyte pleaded guilty to charges of second-degree murder, kidnapping and sexual battery. But he was granted immunity for testifying against the other suspects, Irvin Riley, 28, and James Bailey, 45.

Whyte was placed on probation for 25 years and ordered not to leave Florida. Bailey and Riley were sentenced to three consecutive life terms in Florida state prison.

Whyte fled Florida in violation of his probation and came to the Groversville area, where his ex-girlfriend lives, authorities said.

Amsterdam police arrested Whyte in June on a criminal impersonation charge when he falsely identified himself after he was stopped for a traffic violation, said Montgomery County Sheriff's Lt. Richard Emery.

Whyte was jailed after authorities learned he had violated his Florida probation. But after the maximum 90 days he had to be released Sept. 25 because Florida authorities did not try to extradite him, said Sheriff's Sgt.

William Brown.

Without an extradition request, there is nothing New York officials can do to ship Whyte back to Florida, said Montgomery County District Attorney Guy Tomlinson.

"Yes, he is violating his probation, and if he ever shows up in Florida we will arrest him," Florida Assistant State Attorney Michael Benito told the Amsterdam Recorder. "But are there plans to extradite him? No."

Whyte's ex-girlfriend, who asked not to be identified, claimed Whyte has threatened her several times since his release. She said she has told local authorities about the threats.

Groversville Police Chief Michael Gancarz said he had not heard about the threats.
