Tournament to aid diabetes association

By STACEY KAPLAN
Staff Writer

Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity will sponsor the fifth annual Skull Bowl, an all-night flag football tournament, on Ehringhaus Field beginning at 5 p.m. today.

The American Diabetes Association will receive proceeds from the tournament.

About 10 teams of 15 people each are expected to participate in the tournament, said Evan Klutz, game coordinator.

Many of the teams have played intramurals and want to continue their season, he said. Also, Air Force ROTC and some fraternities have entered teams.

The rules for the Skull Bowl are the same as those for intramural football except flags are used.

Each game consists of 18-minute halves. "It's a combination of soccer, hockey, football and some other sports," said Jim Muse, promotions chairman. "The flags make it easier to know where the person went down."

Most of the proceeds come from the sale of 600 T-shirts. Also, many local sponsors and a $30 entry fee for each team will contribute to the fraternity's goal of $3,000, Muse said.

"We are trying to make the Skull Bowl a major campus event and create more name awareness for our fraternity," he said. "We've been struggling without a house since we were re-chartered in 1984."

The name, Skull Bowl, is connected with Phi Kappa Sigma's nickname, the "silver skulls," Muse said.

Rich Fletcher, president of Phi Kappa Sigma, is optimistic that this year's Skull Bowl proceeds will top last year's total of $1,600 which was given to the American Diabetes Association. "Every year the amount of money that we make exceeds the year before."

Campus News

Group aids African students

UNC's South African Scholarship Fund, a Campus Y group, organized in the Pit Monday to ask students, faculty and staff to put spare change to good use.

The group began raising money three years ago to fund the college educations of four South Africans, said co-chairwoman Natasha McConnachie. The Institute of Race Relations at Johannesburg will disperse the scholarship money, she said. The scholarships will be applied to South African universities, like the University of Cape Town and Wits University.

The group began with a goal of $100,000 and has raised about $50,000, McConnachie said. "We want people to know we need their support. It's a way of direct interaction with South Africa."

While it is necessary for black students to be concerned about the welfare of South Africans, it is equally as important for other students to show concern, said Michelle Reid, a member of the group.

"It's not a problem just for blacks. We need everyone to get together for the cause."

CIAAC may seek support

The CIA Action Committee (CIAAC) may enlist the Student Congress in its effort to conduct an on-campus debate with a CIA representative, CIAAC member Joey Templeton said Wednesday. The CIAAC may ask the congress to pass a resolution in support of the group's request for a debate, she said.

Jordan to come home

Michael Jordan will return to Chapel Hill Oct. 21 when he and the Chicago Bulls take on the Miami Heat in an exhibition game at 7:30 p.m. in the Smith Center. Tickets are $13 and can be purchased from the Smith Center box office or Ticketron outlets.

Oct. 19 to be alcohol-free

Chancellor Paul Hardin Wednesday declared Oct. 19 an "alcohol-free day" as part of National Alcohol Awareness Week.

"I'm asking every person to pledge total abstinence for a 24-hour period," he said. Students, faculty and staff will be asked to sign a pledge for next Thursday. Hardin signed the pledge immediately after addressing the crowd in the Pit.

"I will sign the pledge and observe it," he said. "It won't be a burden for me; I'm abstemious anyway, but I'm not a stuffed shirt about it."

The declaration was in response to a request from Delta Force, a student organization helping to organize National Alcohol Awareness Week at UNC.

RAs come to Chapel Hill

This weekend, the University will host a Resident Assistant (RA) Drive-in Conference. About 90 to 100 RAs from around the state will meet to discuss ideas and skills.

Trivia people wanted

The Carolina Union Advisory Board College Bowl Committee will sponsor the 1989 annual college bowl and will accept sign-ups through Oct. 20. The bowl is a question-and-answer game played between two teams of four players each. All full-time undergraduate and graduate students are eligible. Team and individual applications are accepted.

Diabetes target of fundraiser

The first JDF Walk of the Central Carolina Chapter of the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation is scheduled for 10 a.m. Oct. 21.

The walk will cover about 10 kilometers at Shelley Lake in Raleigh.

Officials report few losses from New Carroll fire

By MYRON B. PITTS
Staff Writer

A fire on the roof of New Carroll Hall at 8 p.m. Tuesday caused little damage to the building, and interrupted classes were resumed that night, said an administrator on the scene.

Executive MBA program classes were in progress when a faculty member pulled a fire alarm, said Barbara Levine, director of administrative operations for the school of business administration. That faculty member, with the aid of campus police, cleared the building of personnel.

People re-entered the building at about 10 p.m., she said.

Chapel Hill deputy fire chief Rob Williams said the blaze covered an area of about five to 10 square feet and only damaged construction materials for roof repair. Fifteen firefighters, with the aid of three fire trucks, extinguished the blaze without injuries or complications.

"I think it was under control in the first 10 or 15 minutes," Williams said.

Inside the building, a small amount of smoke was found and dispersed, Williams said. Firefighters patrolled the corridors of New Carroll and reset all triggered fire alarms.

"In terms of the building, it is fine," Levine said. Some of the ceiling tiles may have to be replaced, but no major repairs were needed, she said.

"We are working on it," Williams said of the Chapel Hill Fire Department's efforts to ascertain a cause for the blaze. The fire apparently was initiated near the roofing materials, Williams said.

Damaged materials included stacks of two-by-three insulation boards and several rolls of felt paper.

Task force to address UNC financial aid policies

By MARCIE BAILEY
Staff Writer

Students, faculty, administrators and directors of many campus organizations Tuesday will attend a day-long Financial Aid Task Force meeting to examine UNC's aid policies and programs and to make recommendations to the chancellor.

The idea for the meeting was created last July by Student Body President Brien Lewis, who will chair the meeting.

"Many tuition and financial aid issues concern widespread aspects of the University," Lewis said. "I thought we needed a group of student leaders and chancellors to identify problems, what has been done about existing problems and ways to solve them.

"We have a consensus on a number of issues that will be addressed. We're going to present a concise list of goals and make recommendations that we can submit to the chancellor. That way we will have the weight of the University committees behind us."

Issues to be discussed at the meeting include inefficiency in the Financial Aid Office, ways to ease paperwork and staff shortages in the office, ways for Student Stores to provide money for scholarships now that the Pit Stop is closed and ways to make the work study program more effective, student government officials said Thursday.

Stephanie Ahlschwede, student government communications director, will discuss ideas for the work study program.

"We need to find a way of using students' resources, some way students can use their talents in their majors instead of doing something like clerical jobs," she said. "There are some problems with this: productivity is much harder to measure this way, so it must be carefully planned. Students doing creative types of work would be a greater value to the University."

Lewis said, "The whole meeting will be an opportunity for existing problems to be discussed, and a chance for those brainstorming to put ideas on the table to be heard at once."

Meridith Rentz, a special student assistant for the meeting, said investigating creative new ways to get money for financial aid was one of the main reasons for the task force meeting.

"We're going to go in there with our homework done and have a package of ideas ready when we come out."

Ahlschwede said, "It really is a wonderful format. There will be 16 people there so we can interact without going out on tangents. It is a great talking size group."

Rentz said that the group would try to work on as many issues as they could and that the set agenda would not be limiting.

Coptic patriarch to visit Raleigh

By CRYSTAL BERNSTEIN
Staff Writer

The patriarch of the Coptic Orthodox Church, His Holiness Pope Shenouda III, will arrive in Raleigh today to give religious services and to meet Coptic families from North and South Carolina.

The pope, who has been the patriarch of the church for 18 years, is visiting Raleigh during his three-month tour of the United Kingdom, Canada, the United States and Australia. His last visit to the United States was in 1977.

The pope is the spiritual leader of the Coptic Church, an Egyptian church established in Alexandria by St. Mark in 56 A.D. It is a minority religion in Egypt with tenets that parallel those of the Eastern Orthodox Church, said Patrick Rothwell, a junior religious studies major who is helping to organize the pope's reception at the airport.

The Coptic community in the United States includes close to 300,000 people, with about 100 families in the Raleigh area, said Anis Khalil, an engineer with VNR, the research arm of Northern Telecom. There are Coptic churches in Raleigh, Charlotte and Greenville, S.C.

The pope, who lives in Cairo, is the patriarch of the Sea of St. Mark and has jurisdiction over Egypt, Nubia, Ethiopia, Western Pentapolis, Jerusalem, the Middle East, Europe, Canada, the United States and Australia. "Pope Shenouda is probably one of the most important Christian figures nationally," Rothwell said.

His Holiness will be met at the Raleigh-Durham Airport at 6 p.m. by former North Carolina first lady Mrs. Dan Moore, the mayor pro tempore of Raleigh, the mayor of Morrisville and representatives from several churches, Rothwell said.

After his reception, the pope will go to the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox Church in Raleigh to give a vespers service and to hold a question-and-answer session with the audience, said Father Shenouda Ghattas of the St. Mary Coptic Church. The pope will celebrate holy Mass on Saturday morning and leave Raleigh at 3 p.m. Coptic families from North and South Carolina are expected to attend the religious ceremonies.

Groups reveal town council choices

By TRACY LAWSON
Staff Writer

The Alliance of Neighborhoods and the Cat's Cradle recently announced their endorsements for the 1989 Chapel Hill Town Council race.

The Alliance will back incumbents Julie Andresen, David Pasquini and Art Werner and new-comer Joyce Brown.

Art Werner started the Alliance of Neighborhoods in the early 1980s as a forum to hear concerns of local residents.

Representatives from Chapel Hill neighborhoods form the Alliance and work to protect area neighborhoods from problems incurred by extended development. About 40 representatives from the Alliance met Tuesday night and announced their choices for the town council.

Brown, the only challenger to be backed by the Alliance, said she thought she received the group's endorsement because she held many of the same beliefs.

"I am active in my own neighborhood, and I support the protection of the interests of neighborhood residents," she said.

Brown has also received the endorsement of the Greens, an environmental awareness organization, of which she is an active member. "I believe I received the backing by the Greens and the Alliance of Neighborhoods because of my interest in protecting the environment."

Pasquini said he thought he received the Alliance's support because he also shared many of the same concerns. "I think I gained the Alliance's support because we share the same concerns and we view the same issues the same way."

Any endorsement helps a campaign, Pasquini said. "It confirms that I am on the right track, and the issues I am stressing are also important to the Alliance."

Werner and Andresen also received endorsements from the Alliance but they could not be reached for comment.

The Cat's Cradle has also announced its endorsement of Werner. The Cradle is planning an Oct. 19 benefit concert for his campaign. The concert will feature the Popes, Nikki Meets the Hibachi and Statues of Pink.

Frank Heath, the manager of the Cat's Cradle, said they decided to support Werner because of his aid in finding the Cradle's present location and his views on environmental issues.

Last spring the Cat's Cradle reopened in a new location after losing its previous lease. Werner successfully passed a recommendation by the council to help them find this location.

"He (Werner) was the main person to help us get our current location," Heath said. "He was one of the few in the government to understand that the Cradle is an important part of Chapel Hill."

The Cradle agrees with the issues that Werner supports, he said.

Other candidates for the four open town council seats are Alan Rimer, Bill Thorpe and Helen Urquhart.

Supreme Court stalls DTH vote certification

By JENNY CLONINGER
University Editor

The Student Supreme Court, acting on Student Congress representative Jeffrey Beall's (Dist. 7) initiative, filed an injunction Thursday that temporarily will prevent the verification of a student vote.

"Some student laws have been violated, and I'm not going to overlook that," Beall said. He declined to say which points he planned to address in his formal complaint. "I don't want to be specific at this point."

The congress, in a special meeting Sunday, voted to suspend laws requiring a six-day prior notice to place a referendum on a ballot. The referendum, which was on Tuesday's ballot, had been overlooked in an earlier committee meeting. The referendum, which changed the bylaws of the DTH so they agreed with the makeup of its Board of Directors, was passed by students in the campus election.

The complaint revolves around whether the suspension of the public notice requirement is a violation of the Student Constitution, said Asa Bell, Student Supreme Court chief justice.

Beall said he abstained in the congress vote Sunday. "Because it was a special meeting, I didn't have time to research it," he said.

Bell met with Beall and other members of Student Congress Thursday to hear information about the complaint. A pre-trial hearing Sunday will decide whether the case will appear before the full court.

"The injunction is just for the purpose of keeping the Elections Board from going through the certification process on that particular referendum," Bell said.

The delay in verification will keep the case within the constitutional time limit for Student Supreme Court cases, Bell said. "I'm not going to say that there is a constitutional issue here," he said. "I wanted the court to have jurisdiction over this case."

"There is a possibility (of a constitutional issue), but I'm not making that kind of determination. This is just to give all interested parties time to prepare a case for the court."

If the case reaches the Supreme Court and the court decides a constitutional violation was committed, a revote would be called, Bell said. If the court rules against the complaint, the injunction would be removed and the Elections Board would certify the vote. The Student Supreme Court is the highest level in the UNC judicial system.

David Smith, Elections Board chairman, said he didn't understand the reasoning behind Beall's complaint. "We (the congress) had pretty carefully found a way that we would do this (put the referendum on the ballot)," he said. "I think it's something he (Beall) simply doesn't want to happen, and he's taking action to slow it down and, at this point, to frustrate as many people as he can."

Gene Davis, speaker of Student Congress and member of the DTH Board of Directors, said rules previously have been suspended when time was limited. The last incident was during campus elections in February, when three new members of the Elections Board had to be appointed quickly to keep election certification valid, he said.

"I don't understand what Jeffrey's trying to prove," Davis said. "I don't understand why he's dragging Student Congress and student government down, and subsequently dragging down the student body."

"I really think this is a personal vendetta against The Daily Tar Heel and us (the congress). I think Jeffrey Beall needs to go back and re-evaluate all he's done this semester and see what his motive was."
