seconds left in regulation and Stith's four fouls forced him into a more timid role in overtime, Crotty and Rice became the duo to watch.

Rice's final numbers read 14 points and 8 assists - far from spectacular and yet enough to help the Tar Heels to their 11th straight victory. UNC, holding a No. 5 ranking, now stands at 13-1 and 2-0 in the ACC. The No. 13 Cavaliers, who had an eight-game winning streak of their own snapped Saturday, fell to 10-3 and 2-1.

"This is a league game on somebody else's floor," Rice said. "If we can get one or two of these I think that puts us ahead, because not many teams are going to win here."

As regulation wound down, the Tar Heels looked as if they would suffer the same fate Duke had in an upset loss to the Cavs the week before.

A 3-point bomb from Crotty followed by a Stith slam and two Crotty free throws brought UVa. from a 63-62 deficit to a 69-64 advantage with just 2:10 to play.

But UNC clawed back to 70-68 and had a chance to tie when Stith fouled the Tar Heels' Hubert Davis going after a loose ball. Davis made only one of his two free throws, however, leaving UVa. with the ball and a 70-69 lead.

UNC pressured the Cavs in the backcourt, and Fox reached in on Crotty for his fifth foul with :51 to play. When Crotty made only one of his two freebies, the score stood at 71-69.

Rice took his time on UNC's next possession, staring down Crotty before licking his chops and driving in. He launched a playground-style underhand scoop shot five feet from the hoop, and the ball somehow found the net to tie the score at 71, where it stayed for the final Stith opened the first overtime period with a three-point play on a driving layup and a foul by George Lynch. But UNC battled back again, tying the score at 74 on a free throw by Chilcutt and going ahead when Rice blew by Crotty for a layup.

Chilcutt seemed to ice the game when he sank two more free throws with 28 seconds left, giving UNC a 78-75 lead. But Crotty's 3-point prayer over Lynch put five more minutes on the clock.

"We were going to going to try not to let him (Crotty) have three, and George was all over him," Smith said.

The teams tied at 80, 84 and 86 in the second overtime before Rice's jumper proved the diffe-rence. The play, "44p," was a staple in UNC's offense down the stretch. Rice would let the clock tick down to 10 seconds and then drive the lane, keeping his eyes on UNC's two big men, Chilcutt and Eric Montross, posting up underneath.

"He has a choice," Smith said. "He can go to one of the two big men. If they're fronted, then if he misses we should have inside position. We ran that a lot after we lost Fox."

Fox's 21 points and 9-of-13 shooting powered the Tar Heels to as much as a seven-point lead in regulation. But the Cavaliers constantly countered UNC's size and depth advantage - UVa.'s tallest player was 6-9 Ted Jeffries, who fouled out with 1:59 left in regulation - with an edge in quickness and some timely long-range bombing.

The 'Hoos heaved up 28 3-point attempts to UNC's 10, sinking only seven but sinking them in the right places. Crotty alone was 5 of 11 from beyond the semicircle. Turner, who had the 'Hoos other two bombs, finished with CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. -Lugging a huge duffel bag through a corridor in Virginia's University Hall, UNC's Pete Chilcutt was stopped several times by pen-and-pad-toting children begging for his autograph.

Something he's probably not accustomed to, the somber senior forward signed his name and continued to make his way to the team bus. Clad in a coat and tie, Chilcutt left the UNC locker room - a zoo of pencil-and-notebookcarrying reporters — and was again accosted for his John Hancock. Just how many signatures had he given on his 150-yard trot from the Tar Heels' dressing room to the safety of their chartered plane?

"Too many," Chilcutt said. "Right now, I'm just trying to get out of here." The way the Eutaw, Ala., native played Saturday night on UVa.'s homecourt, a monument should be erected in his honor next to the likeness of Thomas Jefferson on Virginia's grounds. After North Carolina's 89-86, double-overtime triumph over the Cavaliers, he could have signed autographs for hours and commanded a fee a la Pete Rose.

Chilcutt left the jaws of the Wahoo faithful sagging all the way down to their orange coattails with an arsenal of offensive moves of Kevin McHale quality.

Chilcutt's line: 38 minutes, 25 points (a career high), 11 rebounds, a pair of assists, a block, a steal and no turnovers. He hit 10 of his 17 floor attempts and 5 of 6 free throws, including two that seemingly put the game away late in the first OT. The fifth-year senior, after a two-point showing in the opening period, came to the rescue in the second stanza to aid North Carolina (13-1, 2-0 in the ACC) to its 11th straight win.

Freshman Eric Montross, who had eight points and four boards, summed up Chilcutt's success Saturday, citing Chilcutt as one of his role models.

demonstrated them tonight," Montross well," Chilcutt said. "I was just playing was the difference in the game." said. "I don't care who he went up against, he was unstoppable. We (the freshmen) have got to find someone to teach us, and I think he's doing it."

Speaking like a true student, Montross was right. Chilcutt's lesson in Posting-Up 101 educated not only the UNC youngsters Montross, Clifford Rozier and Kevin Salvadori, but also Virginia's feeble frontcourt. Chilcutt schooled UVa. sophomore Ted Jeffries, lighting up the scoreboard for 16 points in the second half on a plethora of post maneuvers leaving Jeffries only to snatch the rebound out of the twine.

"Pete uses his body well," said Jeffries, who fouled out with six points.

"All I could do was play good defense. He was on tonight ... very much so." On? You bet he was. Chilcutt hit 9 of 14 shots after the first half. In a 15:53 span in the second half, the 6-foot-10, 232-pounder scored 16 points and continued to pound the boards.

17:52 left in regulation: a 17-footer from the baseline to give UNC a 39-34 cushion. 17:20: a tough baseline turnaround with Jeffries defending for a 41-34 lead. 16:20: a turnaround jumper in the lane to hold on to a seven-point bulge. 10:57: a difficult 12-foot turnaround to put UNC up 51-46.

8:48: a rebound of a King Rice miss for a 55-50 advantage. 5:12: a steal and layup to give the lead back to UNC, 61-60. 4:13: with Jeffries all over him, a five-foot turnaround bank shot, forging

UNC in front, 63-62. 1:59: forcing contact and a foul by Jeffries (his fifth); hits the two free throws, pulling UNC to within three of Virginia at 69-66.

"I definitely felt, especially in the Jones and his Wahoos — to remember. "He's got a lot of moves, and he second half, that I was playing pretty with confidence as I have lately. The guards were able to get it inside to me, and I was able to convert."

While Chilcutt spoke of the game's events as if he were dreaming, UNC head coach Dean Smith didn't seem at all surprised at Chilcutt's sudden second-half outburst.

"Chilcutt can score," Smith said. "He's really improved a lot. We really like his inside game."

Smith continued to enjoy it when, with 3:21 left in the first overtime, Chilcutt, after a Kenny Turner foul, canned one freebie to knot the score at 74. His two charity-stripe swishes with 28 ticks remaining in the opening OT gave UNC a 78-75 lead.

Although Chilcutt says he's never been at the line late in a game (he did, however, hit a 16-footer in the waning seconds of his first game as a Tar Heel, causing overtime and eventual victory over Syracuse in 1987), Smith said he felt confident any player would feel comfortable taking the clutch shot.

"I think every one of our guys can say, 'I can shoot a foul shot when the game's on the line."

In the second overtime, with the game still anyone's to win, Chilcutt gave UNC a four-point margin on a jump hook from right baseline. After two baskets by the Cavaliers, Chilcutt's turnaround on the left baseline put UNC up 86-84 with 1:15 left.

UVa. point guard John Crotty, who led all scorers with 29 points, said Chilcutt's mix of finesse and force is lethal.

"Chilcutt played a great game," Crotty said. "The fact that he can hit the turnaround with his size - that's a deadly combination."

A pair of Crotty free throws tied the game, and after some King Rice heroics, UNC left the floor with a win fueled by two senior leaders. Yes, Rice stole the show in the end, but it was Chilcutt who put on a show for everyone especially Virginia head coach Jeff

"The way I look at it," Jones said, "he

Terps' Williams breaks leg vs. Duke

From Associated Press reports

COLLEGEPARK, Md. - Maryland guard Walt Williams, the team-leader in scoring, assists and steals, will miss at least four weeks with a fractured left fibula, team officials said Sunday.

Williams injured his leg early in Saturday's Atlantic Coast Conference game against Duke. He returned to play in the first half and started the second half, but was forced to leave with just over 12 minutes remaining in the Terrapins' 94-78 loss. Team trainer J.J. Bush said Williams' leg will be placed in a cast on Monday. Bush said Williams, a 6-foot-8 junior, did not do any further damage to the limb by playing on it after suffering the injury because the fibula is not a weightbearing bone. "I hope this will heal quickly and I'll be able to get back out there," Williams said in a statement. "I'm disappointed for sure, but I know the team will continue to do well."
