

CAMPUS AND CITY

University Briefs

Senior Class of 1992 marshals announced

The Senior Class of 1992 marshals are: Bridgette Evette Alston, Joseph Albert Aluse, Philip Augustine Baddour, Katherine Johnson Boney, Curtis Michael Brown, Patrick Shields Calhoun, Kevin Lee Chignell, Fraley Stanton Connell,

Thomas Layton Croft, Andrew Davidson, Raquel Lynnicc Dula, Laurel Patricia Falls, Elisa Ann Fiorenza, Lori Anne Frazier, Kurt Ogden Gilliland, John Cabot Golding, Ruffin Lewis Hall, Anne Elizabeth Hillman, Scott Glen Hunter, Shane LeGrande Johnson, Nicole Robinette Lewis, Matthew Cabot Lowell, Charles Foster Marshall, Jessica Ann Martin, Amanda Gail McAdams, David Christophe Osborn, Gregory Jacques Parent, Shawna Lisette Pinckney, William Gerald Polson, Shelley Elizabeth Pyatt, Erin Douglas Shalley, Nori Cynthia Sie, Rebecca Alyson Smith, James Paul Sposato, Heather Angela Summey, Timothy Lamont Taylor, Lisa Jacqueline Underwood, Mary Elizabeth Ward and Lydia Karol Worley.

Report finds no 1990 football-related deaths

For the first time in the 60 years that records have been kept, there were no deaths during the 1990 football season directly attributable to injuries suffered on the field, according to a UNC study.

Reports are based on newspaper stories that come to Chapel Hill from around the country and information from the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the National Federation of State High School Associations and about 150 volunteers who monitor sports accidents in their states.

Six deaths were indirectly linked to football during the 1990 season. Three were at the high school level and three at the collegiate level, the study showed.

Two of the high school and one of the college students' deaths were caused by heart failure.

Another high school player died following an asthma attack and a college student died of a heat stroke.

The death of another college player appears to be related to sickle cell anemia.

Hulka wins oncology achievement award

Barbara Hulka, Kenan professor and chairperson of epidemiology at UNC, has received The American Society of Preventive Oncology's Distinguished Achievement Award for 1991.

The society, composed of epidemiologists, geneticists, physicians, behavioral scientists and other people interested in preventing cancer, honored the UNC School of Public Health researcher at its annual meeting in Seattle last week.

Hulka also directs the Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center's cancer epidemiology program at UNC.

She was recognized for her distinguished record as an educator and as an analytical and applied epidemiologist.

DTH classified places third in competition

The Daily Tar Heel won third place for best classified advertising section at the national convention of College Newspaper Business and Advertising Managers (CNBAM).

The DTH also won third place for its rate card and second place for its marketing package and office administration package.

CNBAM, which is comprised of 100 of the nation's top college newspapers, held its annual convention in San Antonio April 10-13.

Public safety officer charged in accident

By Peter F. Wallsten
City Editor

Police charged a public safety officer Monday with causing a six-car accident on East Franklin Street last week, Capt. Ralph Pendergraph of the Chapel Hill Police Department said.

Sandra Sue DeWeese, who has been a public safety officer for two and half years, has been charged with a stop light violation and careless and reckless driving.

The decision was reached while reviewing the details of the investigation with Orange-Chatham District Attorney Carl Fox, according to a report released by the police department.

Pendergraph said he could not comment further on the charges.

The accident occurred April 15, when DeWeese was responding to an emergency hostage situation at an apartment complex on the eastern side of town. DeWeese was driving one of the police department's new 1991 Chevrolet Caprices.

As she was driving east to the hostage scene, she allegedly hit a compact car that was travelling through the intersection of East Franklin Street and the access road to Eastgate Shopping Center. The car, driven by William Douglas Humphries of Manson, N.C., spun around, throwing Humphries from the car, according to witness reports.

Humphries, who is still receiving treatment at UNC Hospitals for injuries sustained in the accident, was listed in fair condition Monday evening, a hospital spokeswoman said. Humphries had been in serious condition.

The majority of reports police received from witnesses stated that the warning lights and the siren on DeWeese's car were not in operation, the report states.

After hitting Humphries' car, DeWeese allegedly continued into the westbound lane, where her vehicle struck three additional cars.

The investigation was originally scheduled to be completed Friday afternoon, but Fox advised police to interview more witnesses before ending the process.

DeWeese was travelling to Walden at Greenfields apartments, where Banner Paul Brannock of Orange County was allegedly holding Daisy Barnhill at gunpoint in her residence.

Brannock and Barnhill had been involved in a romantic relationship, but police are unsure of the details.

Police have charged Brannock with second degree kidnapping and breaking and entering. The combined maximum sentence for the felony charges is 40 years, police said.

DTH/Debbie Stengel

Air(less) ball

Brent "Zagnut" Taylor, a sophomore from Roswell, Ga., takes advantage of the clear weather to shoot baskets Monday afternoon at the Pi Kappa Alpha house.

Committee asks freshmen to write legislators about budget cut effects

By Natarsha Witherspoon
Staff Writer

Members of the Bicentennial Class Committee are hoping to unify the freshman class at a time when many students are concerned about the state budget crisis and the impact it will have on their education.

Committee members plan to sell Bicentennial T-shirts Tuesday through Friday in the Pit, said Committee Chairman Russ Helms.

While they are selling the shirts, members will encourage freshmen to write to their legislators about the budget cuts.

The legislators' addresses will be available at the table with sample letters. "The students can write the letters right there," Helms said.

Freshmen will feel the effects of the budget cuts more than other UNC students because they have three to four years left at the University, he said.

"I know a lot of us when considering majors will look closely at the classes that are offered," he said. "I hope freshmen will take advantage of this opportunity to show support for our class and write letters."

Greg Timmerman, a freshman from Winston-Salem, said he thought the letter-writing campaign was a good idea.

"I think the situation for the future depends on the state legislature," he said. "I don't think the recent demonstration will have any effect on the situation."

David Lanier, University registrar, said courses usually taken by freshmen and sophomores were hit the worst when the University was forced to eliminate classes because of budget cuts.

But, he said, "Eighty percent of the rising sophomores got over 12 hours through registration."

Maleikka Hardy, a freshman from Charlotte, said she was concerned that political science classes might be canceled next semester.

"I think things will get worse, the more classes that are canceled," she said.

Donald Jicha, General College associate dean, said, "I think we're going to have some difficulty with the incoming freshman class because what's left goes to the new freshmen."

This year's freshman class had more trouble registering than previous first-year students, he said.

"We're going to try to get them the courses they can use and they want," Jicha said.

Freshmen especially will have difficulty registering for English, foreign language and math classes because most of them take these classes, he said.

Jennifer Royston, a freshman from Covington, Ga., said exams in her physical education class were taken orally because there was no money to print exams on paper.

"I think it's a good education but it is discouraging to have all the budget cuts, especially as an out-of-state student."

But many freshmen said they had not felt the effects of the budget cuts.

Mike Esposito, a freshman from Clemmons, said, "Freshman usually take General College perspectives, so many haven't been affected."

Deitra Williams, a freshman also from Clemmons, said she was able to register for all the classes she needed.

"I haven't really been affected but I do feel things will get worse," she said.

By Cathy Oberle
Staff Writer

Ex-officio members of the General Alumni Association, including the University's student body president, will no longer be allowed to vote on board decisions.

Board members voted at a recent meeting not to allow ex-officio members to vote on issues, but they still can participate in discussions, said Doug Dibbert, director of alumni affairs and executive director of the alumni association office.

There are about 50 members on the board, including about 16 ex-officio members, he said. The SBP, senior class president, Daily Tar Heel editor and Order of the Bell Tower president are ex-officio members, as well as alumni representatives of UNC professional schools.

But the decision should not affect students because there has not been a divided vote on the board in at least nine years, Dibbert said. "It shouldn't affect anybody," he said.

Members oppose giving ex-officio members voting privileges, Dibbert said. The voting power of the ex-officio mem-

See VOTE, page 9

General Alumni Association cuts ex-officio member voting

Crisis center needs volunteers due to rape incident increase

By Cheryl A. Herndon
Staff Writer

Rape is on the increase. It is the fastest growing violent crime, according to national statistics and Anna Bess Brown, Volunteer Coordinator/Direct Services of the Orange County Rape Crisis Center.

This makes volunteer services crucial, Brown said. The center is seeking volunteers to be trained as companions, child advocates and community educators.

Volunteer training will begin May 4 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Training sessions will continue every subsequent Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. through June.

"We start with myths and facts," she said. "We talk about some of the rape myths that are out there, like women can really avoid rape, or they can stop it if they want to. We try to dispel those myths," she said.

"Then we do a night on the victim — who is the victim and what does she experience," she said. "We do a night on date and acquaintance rape, and a night on special populations, so we get a real good overview on some of the diverse populations that might be calling us."

Volunteers will attend programs on self-protection and sexual harassment, general listening skills, resources and referrals in the area, and child sexual abuse, she said.

Volunteers will visit community organizations, including the Helpline facility, to talk about suicide prevention.

"One night we go to the emergency room and find out what happens to a rape victim there," Brown said. "One night we go to the Chapel Hill Police Department and hear different members from law enforcement talk about how we can be helpful to them when they're investigating a case. One night we go to the courthouse and Carl Fox, the district attorney, talks to us about how he deals with sexual assault cases and how we can be helpful to the court process."

No previous experience is required to be a volunteer at the center, unless a person is coming to do something very specific, like community education, she said.

Community educators lead programs designed to promote awareness and prevention of rape, sexual assault and child sexual abuse.

"We might want these people to have

See RAPE, page 5

Construction of shopping center on N.C. 54 begins

By Amber Nimocks
Staff Writer

Despite initial opposition from area residents, construction began in March on the new University Village shopping center on N.C. Highway 54 near the University Inn.

"University Village will be a specialty shopping center with a restaurant, pizza take-out, video store, dry cleaners and a bank," said Robert Perry of the East West Partners development firm, which designed the complex. "There will also be other leases we are still working on."

The center will consist of about 22,000 square feet of retail space and 8,000 square feet of office space, he said.

Original plans for the property included an eight-screen movie theater. But problems with the town's development ordinances along with protests from homeowners in nearby neighborhoods encouraged East West Partners to scale down development plans.

"The town was right," Perry said. "The site is not large enough to accommodate a structure such as the movie theater... The new project is a result of a compromise worked out with (homeowners)."

"We hope University Village will be a very convenient little neighborhood center that will lessen drive time for residents in the area."

Charles Zug III, a resident of the Oaks subdivision on N.C. Highway 54, was president of the Oaks Homeowners Association in 1988 when East West Partners was seeking approval for the movie theater project.

See VILLAGE, page 6

SOUTHWICK AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

May 18 & 19

8 Flights - 5 prizes per flight
All prizes by Taylor Made

- 1st - ICW 11 Irons 3-PW
- 2nd - Pittsburgh Persimmon 1, 3 & 5 Woods
- 3rd - Travel Cover Bag
- 4th - Pittsburgh Persimmon 10° Driver
- 5th - Carry All Bag

Directions:
From NC 54 ByPass take Jones Ferry Rd. to Old Greensboro Rd. 12.5 miles to NC 87. Turn right on NC 87 (north) for 9 miles to blinking light. Turn right for 1.2 miles on Boywood to sign.
Call to register
942-0783

Tápas Hour

an international array of complimentary appetizers and hors d'oeuvres served weekdays 4:30 to 6:30 pm in our festive bar. (2 drink minimum)

- Mondays - Well domestics $1.00
- Tuesdays - $1.00 pints and latenight live music
- Wednesdays - Imports and Well high-balls $2.00
- Thursdays - $1.00 pints and latenight live music
- Fridays - Martinis and Manhattans $2.00
- Saturdays - Long Island Iced Teas $3.00

We Will Be Open Graduation Day
University Square • 143 W. Franklin St. • 929-1551

LAST CHANCE

ROOM 213 UNION

Put on April 24 thru April 26 your best face for the 1991 Yackety Yack portraits!

for an appointment call 1-800-873-7591